DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Empie-Van Dyke house was designed in the Queen Anne style and constructed in 1891. The two-story house is constructed entirely of wood frame and is sheathed with bevel siding (4" wide). The building's plan is essentially rectangular with a projecting bay to the west and a corner projecting bay in the plan's northwest corner. The house's appearance is entirely asymmetrical with window and door placement dictated more by interior function than exterior balance. The front (North) elevation was originally dominated by a pyramidal tower above the corner bay. (The tower's roof peak was later removed).

A one story entry veranda starts at the northeast corner and continues to the protrusion of the corner bay. (Approximately one-third of the elevations's total width). A matching side porch (west elevation) creates a secondary entry. The roofs of both the veranda and side porch are supported by Greek Doric columns and a simple entablature.

The steeply pitched roof was originally wood shingled but has since been replaced by asphalt composition type shingles. The roofs four gable ends, a mansard wall area to the rear, and a small mansard band over the veranda, side porch and around the projecting bay remain covered with the original imbricated wood shingles. The gable ends are decorated by round wooden louvered vents.

The simply trimmed wooden windows are double hung with a single upper and lower light. All exterior doors are decorative with enriched wood trim and large glass lights (in some cases stained glass) and transoms. Some plan changes have occurred in the rear service areas but with the exception of room finishes (modern carpet, wall paper, etc.) the interior appears much as it did originally. Many early light fixtures remain, as do original plaster cornice and ceiling rosettes; the main spiral stair, with it's florally trimmed square oak newel posts and turned oak balusters; and oak interior doors and millwork.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Empie-Van Dyke House in Newport is architecturally significant as one of the first homes built in Newport in the late Victorian style of architecture. Additionally, it is one of the few older homes remaining in Newport, which has remained unaltered. It has survived several fires, including the disastrous one of March 1, 1926, which destroyed about thirty blocks of the city, as well as many of Newport's finest residences. The path of the fire came within one block south of the Empie House to Hazel Street and destroyed many of the houses on Hazel Street. The White River Flood of 1927 destroyed even more of Newport's older resources. Therefore the Empie-Van Dyke House is very significant to Newport as representative of Victorian architecture before the turn of the century.

William Burford Empie and his wife, Louise Rimmel Empie, obtained lots 1 and 2, Block 4 of Hirsch's First Addition in 1881 from Aaron and Lazar Hirsch and wives. At that time the property was assessed at $400, which remained its valuation until 1885 when it was assessed at $300. In 1891 Jackson County revised its property tax valuation schedule and the assessment increased to $800. By the 1891 entry was a penciled notation indicating a $1700 improvement, and in 1892 the property was assessed at $2500. These tax records indicate that the present house was constructed in late 1891.

The W. B. Empie Family was a very successful and prominent family in Newport. He bought a steam mill in 1877 and added a planing mill. From 1889-1894 he operated the White River Lumber Manufacturing Company. Local residents report that Mr. Empie saved the choicest lumber and other materials for his own house until he had saved enough to begin construction. The quality of the materials and workmanship attest that only the best were used in the construction.

In 1905 Lula Empie married P. H. Van Dyke and the house remained in the Empie-Van Dyke family until 1969 when it was sold to R. L. "Buzz" Harper, Jr. Mr. Harper used the house as an antique shop. In 1975 Dr. John C. Peyton bought the house and presently resides there.

The Empie-Van Dyke House is a large, two-story Victorian frame house constructed in 1891. The house has remained basically unaltered on the exterior and interior except for the removal of a tower on the northeast corner and the use of flocked wallpaper in the downstairs rooms.

Re: Empie-Van Dyke House
Newport, Jackson County

Dear Dr. Peyton:

The staff of the Arkansas Historic Preservation Program is preparing a National Register nomination for the Empie-Van Dyke House which will be presented to the Arkansas State Review Committee at their March meeting. If approved, the nomination will be submitted to the National Register office in Washington for final consideration.

The National Register of Historic Places is a listing of historic sites, buildings, objects and districts from all across the country that are worthy of preservation.

Entry in the National Register is an honor which places no obligation on a private owner. It does, however, provide protection through comment by the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation from federally financed, assisted or licensed projects that might affect a National Register property.

On October 4, 1976, the President signed a Tax Reform Act of which Section 2124 refers to tax incentives for historic properties. Enclosed you will find an information sheet on that tax act.

If you have any questions concerning the program or this property's nomination, please contact Donna DuVall of our staff.

Enclosed are two copies of this letter. Please complete the form below, sign and return the original to our office. The copy is for your files. We would appreciate receiving any comments you might have concerning the nomination of this property. If we do not hear from you within 30 days your approval will be assumed.

Sincerely,

Barbara Woodard

Barbara Woodard, Deputy Director
Arkansas Historic Preservation Program

I approve of the above property being nominated to the National Register of Historic Places.
