Supervisor's House #1001: 1938; 26' x 43'; T-shaped, 1 1/2 story, wood-frame, poured concrete foundation, basement, wood-shingled medium gable roof with hip-roofed enclosed porch in rear. Squared rubble, coursed stone chimneys offset straddling ridgeline and on rear slope of roof. Wall shake exterior, vertical board and batten on all gable ends. Eight-over-eight and six-over-six double-hung sashes, one twenty-light wood casement window. No decoration. No significant exterior alteration apparent.

Detached rectangular, single vehicle wood-frame garage. Wood-shingled medium gable roof, wall shake exterior with vertical board and battens on gable ends. No decoration.

SIGNIFICANCE:

The Supervisor's residence typifies the construction projects undertaken by the Civilian Conservation Corps and signifies the aid to the local community provided by the emergency work-relief program through employment of youth and experienced craftsmen, purchase of building materials and camp supplies, and personal expenditures of enrollees. The property represents the Forest Service's presence in the locality, as part of the headquarters for field operation, and denotes, via the physical facilities required to carry out the agency's expanding responsibilities, the critical transition in the Service's development from custodial superintendence to extensive resource management. The Supervisor's residence exemplifies the rustic architectural idiom developed by the Forest Service, Pacific Northwest Region, to impart Forest Service identity and to represent its purposes and ideals, and signifies the agency's particular interpretation of a singular expression of early twentieth century American architectural thought. Possessing high qualities of design and execution, the residence is a very good example of an architectural location invested with special aesthetic and associative values by the agency that created it.
