DESCRIBE THE D					- _	-

The original core of the Peleg Arnold Tavern was constructed in 1690 and was a small, timber-framed, gabled dwelling twenty feet square. Around 1790 the building was enlarged by an addition to the north end.

A late 19th-century print and several photographs of that time show the building as a substantial clapboarded structure of two-and-a-half storeys, its six-bay front facing Woonsocket Hill Road and its gable-end towards the Great Road. Two large brick chimneys pierced the roof-ridge near both ends; a small ell to the rear had a tall, slim brick chimney. A large, one-and-a-half-storey, gable-roofed barn, entered by means of a ramp of dirt and stone and having a central cupola on the roof and a palladian window in the gable, was shown located behind and to one side of the house; but this was subsequently removed from the property. Later changes to the main building included an enlargement of the one-storey entrance portico to form a covered verandah round the front and sides. However, a decline in the fortunes of the owners in the 20th century resulted in the removal of the exterior additions--portico, verandah, and rear ell.

The numerous alterations to the exterior of the original house and tavern (as it became) have so affected the structure that architecturally it no longer exemplifies a typical early Rhode Island building. Also radically changed has been the interior, which was remodelled into apartments several decades ago. The formerly-thriving tavern is today a large apartment house at the corner of Woonsocket Hill Road and Great Road. Its chief value now is in its historical associations rather than its architectural merits.

8. Significance.

The Peleg Arnold Tavren, a landmark in the Union Village area for more than 280 years, is noteworthy for several reasons. It is one of the oldest buildings there; it served as a tavern and gathering-place along the old Great Road between Providence and Worcester for more than one-and-a-half centuries; it played a role in the Revolutionary War as a depository for arms and as a recruiting center; and it was the home of Peleg Arnold, a man of local and state prominence, who served the state and nation with distinction in several important positions during a formative period in our nation's development.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

In 1690, the small dwelling-house that later evolved into the Peleg Arnold Tavern was built in what is now Union Village by Richard Arnold, a member of the family that originally settled Woonsocket. Arnold's house was the first one constructed in Union Village, and one of the earliest in the township of North Smithfield.

In 1739, during the ownership of Thomas Arnold, the building was licensed as a tavern to serve the needs of travelers along the route from Providence to Worcester, Massachusetts, when the original rough trail was enlarged into a roadway and began to carry more traffic. Upon the death of Thomas in 1765, his son, Peleg, became owner.

Peleg Arnold, educated at Rhode Island College (later Brown University), was an energetic man who became deeply involved in the affairs of his times. Upon hearing of the conflicts at Lexington and Concord in the spring of 1775, he became aroused and began recruiting soldiers for the coming struggle with England. At a town meeting held in his tavern in June, 1775, that place was designated as one of the three depositories for arms to be used by the townsmen in the event of invasion by the British. During the War for Independence, Peleg Arnold attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the Continental Army.

Following the war, Peleg Arnold served as a justice of the peace from 1782 to 1788 and also, from 1786 to 1789, as a delegate to the Continental Congress. In 1795 he was made Chief Justice of the Rhode Island Superior Court. His final service to this state was as Chief Justice of its Supreme Court from 1799 to 1809 and 1810 to 1812.

After the Revolutionary War the Arnold house gained great renown as a thriving tavern and continued as such after the death of Peleg Arnold in 1820. Later in the 19th century a daughter of James Arnold married Albert Mowry. During Mowry tenure the establishment was transformed "...from an ordinary inn into one of the most luxurious taverns in New England" (Woonsocket Call, September 9, 1948), and it so served until the early 20th century. After several changes of ownership and a period during which it was vacant and neglected, it was converted into apartments in the late 1940's.
