DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Hamilton Place was built in 1832 in rural Maury County and was one of four fine homes built by four Polk brothers within a one-mile radius. Hamilton Place is almost purely Georgian style, but there are touches of the Greek Revival style in the large two-story $2^{1/2}$ brick. For example, the pedimented front portico has slender Doric columns below and Ionic columns above supporting the twostory recessed front porch. The large front windows and two front doors are Greek Revival in style and reflect the period that was emerging in Tennessee by this time.

The main two-story portion of the structure is original with the flanking one-story wings added shortly after the original house was finished. The brick for Hamilton Place was fired on the place and is laid in the flemish bond. The timbers were well-seasoned before being used and skilled craftsmen were brought from North Carolina to do the finishing construction work.

The house contains 17 rooms, including the kitchen which is separate from the main house but connected by a covered passageway. Six large brick chimneys rise above the house with twin chimneys on each end tied together with a brick parapet rising above the roof ridge. A fine cut limestone foundation adds to the solidarity of the structure.

Upon entering a hall in the front part of the house, one comes to a cross hall running perpendicular to the entrance hall. At either end of this cross hall are beautiful spiral stairways leading to the second floor. Separating the front and rear halls are four Ionic columns supporting three well-proportioned arches in the classical design. A fine plaster ceiling medallion is found in the ceiling of the rear hall. The doors, windows, and interior woodwork, and floors are original and in fine condition.

The brick smokehouse at the rear of the house is original and the only remaining outbuilding. The fine gardens that were originally located just west of the house are no longer intact, but remains of large boxwoods are there as are the fine magnolias that were brought from Louisiana and planted by the first owners.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Hamilton Place was built by Lucius J. Polk on a portion of a 5400 acre land grant given to him and three of his brothers by their father, Col. William Polk, who received the large grant for his Revolutionary War services. Col. Polk, a native of Raleigh, North Carolina, spent little time in this new land, but divided the large grant among four of his sons.

In 1832 Lucius Polk built Hamilton Place, the first of the four great houses to be built by the brothers. It was named for a brother, Hamilton, who had died the previous year while a student at Yale. The other houses were: Ashwood Hall (1836) built by Leonidas Polk, burned 1874; Westbrook (ca. 1840) built by Rufus Polk, burned just after the Civil War; and Rattle and Snap (1845) built by George Polk (Registered National Landmark). All these great houses were located very near each other and amidst the homes was St. John's Episcopal Church, built in 1841, which was the plantation church for the area built by the Polk brothers. It has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Hamilton Place is an architectural treasure for the Maury County area with its Georgian classical detail remaining almost as it was built. Nathan Vaught, a noted builder in the early 1800's in Maury County, is said to have built the fine residence. The house was said to have had fine gardens as Lucius Polk's first wife, Mary Eastin, loved the gardens of Louisiana that she knew and thus had Magnolia trees imported from Louisiana for her home.

Lucius Polk brought his bride, Mary Eastin, to Maury County after their marriage in the White House in Washington. Mary Eastin was the niece of Emily Donelson, mistress of the White House during the Jackson administration, thus explaining the place of the wedding. Andrew Jackson visited Hamilton Place as did James K. Polk and other noted politicians, artists, writers, and clergymen.

Lucius Polk served in the State Senate representing Maury County in 1831 and was Adjutant General of the state. He was also active in the Mason activities in Tennessee. Lucius Polk was the father of ten children. A daughter, Mary Brown Polk, married Col. Henry Clay Yeatman who bought the place upon the death of her father.

8. SIGNIFICANCE

Hamilton Place was occupied by the Yeatman family until 1970 when the house sold and for the first time was out of the hands of the descendants of Lucius Polk.

Not only was the house and its owner significant, but it was a part of a very large area that was one of the best farming areas in the state. This vast area along the Mount Pleasant Pike where many prominent families had large farms and plantations, proved to be the rich phosphatebearing area of Maury County. Many families (Pillow, Armstrong, Ridley) built fine homes in the area. Clifton Place, home of Gideon Pillow, (National Register property) is located very near on the Mount Pleasant Pike. These great agricultural and professional families seemed to be competing with each other to see who could built the best houses. The result was that these families left behind a solid testimony of skill and taste.
