STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

In 1855, Dr. Allen Voorhees leslev signed articles of agreement with Thomas and James M. Dixon, Baltimore architects, to draw plans for his mansion in New Castle. During the same period when Rhenish castles were appearing on the banks of the Hudson River, Dr. Lesley applied the impressions gleaned from his extensive travels to the plans for his own home.

Dr. Lesley presented the Dixons with detailed specifications for the finishing work on the house. The builder was Augustin Van Kirk of Salem, New Jersey.

A native of Philadelphia, Dr. Lesley was born on Vine Street in June of 1822. The son and grandson of cabinetmakers, he deviated from the family trade to take a medical degree at the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Lesley's reputation as a surgeon was well-known; at an early date, he applied microscopy and techniques of anesthesia to the treatment of disease.

The Leslev connection with Delaware apparently springs from the purchase of a farm near Delaware City by Allen Lesley's father, the secretary-treasurer of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal Company. Dr. Lesley lived on the farm for a time after graduating from the University of Pennsylvania, but moved to New Castle after his marriage in 1844. As a state senator and speaker of the senate, Dr. Lesley held Democratic pro-slavery views.

Between Dr. Lesley's death in 1881, and 1903, the house remained in the hands of a succession caretakers. Seldon S. Deemer, a New Castle steel manufacturer, purchased the house in 1903. He restored the house and added new plantings to the garden already full of foreign shrubs that had been brought to New Castle and successfully domesticated. However, Deemer sold much of the acreage surrounding the mansion. John Campbell, who bought the property in 1930 for a fraction of the price Deemer had paid, continued the sale of the land. The house itself deteriorated, acquiring the name "Campbell's Folly." In recent years the house has again been restored to accomodate both living quarters and the office of a weekly newspaper.
