Representation in Existing Surveys: Inventory of Historic Places in South Carolina, 1981

Description: Battery Cheves is located on the southeastern shore of James Island in a suburban residential area. A simple open battery with four gun emplacements, Battery Cheves is about 280 feet long with a parapet 12.5 feet high and a powder magazine about 15 feet in height. The total position is approximately 240 feet deep. It is currently completely obscured by a dense growth of vegetation.

Significance: Battery Cheves was built in 1863 and named for Capt. Langdon Cheves, Confederate engineer killed at Morris Island in 1863.<sup>39</sup> This battery was designed to protect the area between Fort Johnson and Battery Haskell from amphibious attack coming from Morris Island. Cheves mounted two pieces of heavy artillery at the time of capture.<sup>40</sup>
