Noah Moore House

The Noah Moore House at 111 Main Street in Enterprise is one of the best examples of the Spindlenwork mode of Queen Anne style architecture in Clarke County. This asymmetrical, one-and-one-half story, three bay wide house rests on brick piers with brick infill. It is crowned by a hip roof with two interior brick chimneys, one of which is corbelled. A wing at the west side of the front facade features a gable with returns and a box bay with a pedimented gable and a paired 2/2 double hung sash window with panelled aprons below it. In the ell created by this wing is a wraparound porch which terminates on the east (side) elevation at another gabled wing. The wraparound porch has new brick steps with new handrails but also features original details such as turned posts, a balustrade, a spindled frieze and a bracketed cornice. Located in the front porch area is a single-leaf door with a beveled glass light, a beveled glass transom and beveled glass sidelights with aprons below them. There is also a paired, floor-length 2/4 window with louvred shutters. The shutters are probably not original. In the porch area on the east elevation is another floor-length window and a 2/2 double hung sash window. The gabled wing displays a gable with returns and also pierced bargeboard in its peak plus a single and a paired 2/2 double hung sash window. The west (side) elevation also has a gabled wing with returns. In the rear ell created by the wing are an original, small, one story section and an addition. The rear elevation has an addition and an enclosed porch.

The interior features fourteen foot ceilings and beaded board wainscoting. In the central hall is a spindled frieze.

The only outbuilding associated with this building is a frame garage which appears to date from the mid-twentieth century. It is a noncontributing element.

Located in a quiet neighborhood on the west side of the Chickasawhay River, the Noah Moore House occupies a corner lot. The house and yard are well-maintained. The yard features azalea bushes, trees and flowers in its landscape. The neighborhood is comprised of other houses which either do not meet the fifty year age criteria, have been drastically altered and/or possess no architectural or historical significance.

National Register of Historic Places Continuation Sheet

Clarke County, Mississippi

Section number 8 Page 1

The Noah Moore House, constructed c. 1895, is eligible for the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion C. Located in West Enterprise, the Noah Moore House is one of the most sophisticated articulations of the Spindlework mode of the Queen Anne style located in Clarke County. Judged within the local context of the county, it is a most significant example of a late nineteenth century residential resource both for its architecture and as a symbol of the social changes that came to Clarke County because of the railroads and industrialization. The Noah Moore House retains a high degree of architectural integrity.

Queen Anne architecture is best understood as a "movement containing several related but divergent stylistic modes" rather than a distinct style. The major shared attributes of Victorian Queen Anne architecture are:

- an informal, asymmetrical plan
- a steeply pitched roof with elaborately designed chimneys, often displaying a tower or cupola
- wall surfaces with a variety of textures
- an eclectic variety of design details (excluding Gothic or Italianate). The character of the design elements is the chief differentiation between the five modes of the style (Cawthon 1991:3).

Richard J. Cawthon, chief architectural historian with the Mississippi Department of Archives and History, identified five modes of the Queen Anne style that were constructed in the United States. In Mississippi, the most popular modes were the Rectilinear mode, the Spindlework mode and the Free Classical mode. The Noah Moore House is a locally significant articulation of the Spindlework mode. According to Cawthon, "The Spindlework mode began to become widespread by about 1890 for both brick and wood buildings, but is more commonly seen in wood. It is distinguished by extensive use of lathe-turned ornament, particularly evident in balustrades and open friezes trimming broad verandas. The Spindlework mode often has round or curved features, including turrets and gazebo-like extensions of the veranda . . . ." (Cawthon 1991:3-4).

In Mississippi the majority of Queen Anne buildings are single-family residences and generally appear in one of two basic plans. The first is a large house of two or two-and-one-half stories with asymmetrical massing. The second is a smaller, one-story cottage with a central block from which a gabled wing extends asymmetrically from one side of the front facade and a porch spans the rest of the elevation. Its design elements are often less ornate and its floor plan simpler than those of the larger houses (Cawthon 1991:5-6).

The Queen Anne style dominated residential architecture in this country from circa 1885 to 1905. Its era of popularity roughly corresponded to the period 1880 to 1914 when political and economic leadership in Mississippi was in the hands of a newly empowered urban elite. The power of the state's antebellum planter class was usurped in the late nineteenth century by an educated upper middle class that was town-based. This change occurred as Mississippi's economy became more industrialized. Members of this class often chose the Queen Anne style when constructing their new homes. Thus, a Queen Anne house came to symbolize the wealth and power of the new elite. Because the state's newfound prosperity was urban-based, most Queen Anne houses are found in the towns rather than in the rural areas (Cawthon 1991:1, 8; Federal Writers Project 1938:150-152 & Bettersworth II 1973:632).

Clarke County experienced steady growth and increased prosperity during the period 1880 to 1914 because of the lumber and the textile industries plus the construction of the New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad. These industries and the railroad had a great impact on community development in the county. The textile industry spawned a whole new town known as Stonewall which grew steadily during the late 1800s. Enterprise and Quitman grew in population and prestige because of their lumber mills. The railroad's route along the west bank of the Chickasawhay River revitalized West Enterprise.

There were three Queen Anne style houses in the Spindlework mode that were identified in Clarke County. The Noah Moore House is located in Enterprise, the C. V. Akin House in DeSoto and the Captain C. C. Ferrill House in Quitman. Though modest examples of the Spindlework mode, these houses are representative of how the Queen Anne style was interpreted in Clarke County.

The Noah Moore House, within the local context of Clarke County, is one of the most sophisticated interpretations of the Spindlework mode in the county. Design elements derived from this mode accent both the interior and the exterior of the house. The interior of the house features a spindled frieze in the central hall. The asymmetry of the house's design combined with a box bay and a wraparound porch displaying turned posts and a spindlework frieze make the Noah Moore House a significant example of the Spindlework mode. The Noah Moore House also symbolizes the building boom that occurred in West Enterprise during the late nineteenth century because of the construction of the New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad.

In summary, the Noah Moore House is a locally significant articulation of the Spindlework mode of the Queen Anne style of architecture. Furthermore, the house illustrates how the social and economic changes sweeping Clarke County at the turn of the century impacted the community of Enterprise. The Noah Moore House maintains a high degree of architectural integrity.

VERBAL BOUNDARY DESCRIPTION: The point of beginning for the boundary is at the northeast corner of 111 Main Street where Ritchey Street runs into Main Street. The boundary follows the eastern property line of 111 Main Street for approximately 233 feet and then goes west for about 200 feet. The boundary then heads north for about 233 feet and, upon reaching the northern property line at Main Street, follows it east to the point of beginning.

BOUNDARY JUSTIFICATION: The boundaries being nominated include only that portion of Parcel No. 019-24C-005-01 on which the house, its outbuilding and immediate yard are located.
