DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Ammendale Normal Institute is a Victorian structure of an ecclectic character, with design influences from the Queen Anne, Italianate, and Second Empire Revival schools of architecture. The two story brick building sits on a high stone foundation; the roof is a mansard, pierced with dormer windows and gables.

The main (east) facade is over 100 feet long, consisting of a main block with projecting wings; the main block was completed in 1884 and the wings were added four years later. The wings continue the style of the main block. A 90 foot long chapel wing extends from the rear (west) facade and terminates in a semi-octagonal apse; like the main block, the chapel has a high stone foundation, but it has an A roof in contrast to the mansard

The main entrance is marked by a gabled entrance porch with a segmentally-arched entryway and patterned brickwork in the gable. Behind the porch, a four story tower projects above the roofline. The tower has a bracketed cornice that carries an ironwork balcony; above the cornice is a framed bell cote with a steeply-pitched, dormered hipped roof. The third story window head repeats the segmental arch of the porch entryway; the forth story elevation has a niche for a Madonna and Child statue.

Flanking the tower are two gables. Their surface treatment repeats the brickwork pattern of the entrance porch. They break through the main roof cornice and thus repeat the vertical emphasis of the tower.

Between the entrance porch and each of the wings is a twostory gallery. It is supported by a row of iron columns with decorative bracketing; the railings are of patterned ironwork.

The wings both have central gables with patterned brickwork. The central, gabled portion of the wall surface projects forward slightly, and windows are grouped to give emphasis to the central section of each wing.

The window heads are segmentally arched, with the arches projecting slightly from the wall surface and connected by string courses. The entryway arch is formed of moulded brick, as are the balustrades of the steps to the porch. Both the dormer windows and the iron columns use a star motif; the star is the symbol of the Christian Brothers.

The interior of the building has been altered in order to meet demands for space as the needs of classroom have changed.

St. Joseph's Church stands southeast of the school and is separated from it by a hedge. In general form, the building is a small, brick typical of the late nineteenth century. The sidewalls have pointed arched windows, separated by small brick buttresses, glazed with double hung sash. The low entry porch is at the center of the main facade; the double doors topped by the transon light.

The detailing of the church, however, is as ecclectic as that of the main building. In the center of the gable there is

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Ammendale Normal Institute has been the home of the Christian Brothers since 1880, when they moved their novitiate from Calvert Hall in Baltimore to a rural site. Admiral Daniel Ammen, U.S.N., owned land along the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad near Beltsville and offered the Order twenty acres at $20 per acre. Brother Tobias, Director of St. John's College in Washington, D.C., accepted the offer and immediately began building.

The first novitiate, completed in November 1880, was a 40 foot by 50 foot, three-story building. In addition to selling twenty acres, Admiral Ammen donated five acres of land for a church with the stipulation that the church and the school always be separated by a hedge; the hedge is still standing. In October 1880, St. Joseph's Church was dedicated. The structure was built in a style seldom seen in Prince George's County, where there are no other examples of Queer Anne patternwork in brick and few buildings that show an awareness of late nineteenth century ecclecticism. The general style of the chapel set the pattern for the rebuilding of the novitiate begun in 1883.

For the novitiate, the Christian Brothers contracted with a Baltimore builder named McCusker. The first stage of construction was the center section and chapel, which took about a year to build and cost $33,000. The workmen were evidently not local, since they boarded at the school during the construction. In December, 1884, James Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore, dedicated the building.

In 1888, the flanking wings were added and the building took on its present appearance. Since the wings are in the same style as the main block, the building has a unified appearance and character. It was one of the largest--perhaps the largest--building in Prince George's County at the time and enabled the Brothers to carry on several schools in a single structure.

Before the construction of Ammendale Normal Instutute, Mme. La Coste, Admiral Ammen's mother-in-law, had conducted a local school at Drury Mansion. After the new institution was completed, the Brothers assumed responsibility for the education of local children as well as their own clergy and teachers, with a circular window set in a panel formed by a pointed arch. At the eaves, bargeboards are supported on their lower end by brackets which, in turn, rest on a lower belt course. The entrance porch has similarly-carved work in the gable and the lower end of the rafters is supported on brackets. Along the sidewalls, the rafter ends are cut in an ogee shape.

the Institute included a juniorate for younger boys, a novitiate, and a scholasticate where Brothers received college training.

Over the years, the Christian Brothers added neighboring lands to their holdings, which today total about 400 acres. Thus, they were assured the quiet and peaceful environment associated with a religious life. But with a station on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at the Ammendale post village, they were not isolated from the secular world.

Admiral Ammen, the original owner of the land and donor of the church site, was a convert to Catholicism. Although a naval officer he seems to have had both an interest in education and a wide-ranging curiosity about the world. He accompanied the Wilke exploration of the Mediterranean Sea and a scientific expedition to the Paraguan River; during the Civil War he participated in several battles along the blockaded southern coast of the Atlantic; and he was an ardent and articulate advocate of the American Isthmian Canal (about which he wrote five books). He wrote one book on the history of the naval involvement in the Civil War as well as one advocating naval reform and modern-Country Homes and Their Improvement described the ization. advantages of country living but warned that the popular desire for rural life might not suit everyone's taste. But after his initial involvement in the establishment of Ammendale Normal Institute, Admiral Ammen seems to have had little involvement in its activities and his reasons for urging it along remain unknown.

Architecturally, the Normal Institute is an outstanding example of the ecclectic styles of the 1880's. This building, constructed in a rural environment, shows an awareness of stylistic trends of the period. The presence of a structure of this quality, style, or scale is unusual in Maryland outside the urban centers of Baltimore and Washington.
