Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The Exchange Bank Building is a two-story rectangular structure of red brick on a stone foundation. It is in the Italianate style with a bracketed primary cornice and a secondary cornice above the street-level facade. Bays are separated by pilasters. The first floor has a double storefront with large windows. Another storefront on the south side of the building has been altered. The entry for the second floor has a semi-circular arch with a fanlight.

The storefronts have been altered with a metal awning, metal siding between the awning and secondary cornice, and a colorful paint job. All of these are fundamentally reversible. A small balcony on the second floor facade has been removed.

The second floor has two-over-two windows with semi-circular arches of buffcolored brick. The keystone of each arch is of cast stone with a floral design. Similar stones are visible on the ground floor beneath the paint. The cornice and pediment appear to be of pressed metal. One of several original brick chimneys is intact.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The Exchange Bank Building is significant as a notable example of the secondgeneration masonry commercial structures commonly constructed on the main streets of Dakota County towns during the last third of the 19th century. Built in 1880 on the busy corner of Third and Oak Streets in Farmington, the brick building replaced first-generation wooden stores destroyed in a disastrous fire in 1879. For many years the Exchange Bank occupied the south side of the first floor, with a hardware store on the north side; the Post Office in the rear of the first floor; and an opera hall on the second floor. The bank and post office have moved to newer quarters and the opera hall is defunct, yet the structure continues to function as an essential part of the business district with new tenants. The building's corner location ensures maximum visibility for the elaborate metal cornice and floral motif of the cast-stone trim. In spite of largely reversible alterations to the double storefront, the Exchange Bank Building remains one of the best-preserved second-generation commercial structures in Dakota County.
