SUMMARY

Constructed in 1942, the Oak Grove Missionary Baptist Church is a Plain-Traditional style one-story wood frame building, with Craftsman influences, located approximately three miles southwest of the small community of Blevins, Arkansas. The rectangular shaped building with weatherboard walls rests upon concrete block piers and is topped with a jerkin-head roof that is covered with composition shingles and a hip roofed steeple on the front left of the church's roof. Perpendicular and west to the church rests a Plain-Traditional style one-story wood frame Sunday school. This weatherboard and stucco building rests upon cast concrete piers and is topped with a gable roof that is covered with composition shingles. A cut stone well lies southeast of the church. The Sunday school building and well were constructed shortly after the church was built. A cemetery is located adjacent to the church, but due to the mixing of historic graves with non-historic graves, it is ineligible for the National Register of Historic Places and is not included in this nomination.

ELABORATION

Church Building

Located approximately three miles southwest of Blevins, Arkansas, located in northeast Hempstead County, the Oak Grove Missionary Baptist Church is an excellent example of Plain-Traditional architecture with Craftsman influences. Constructed in 1942, the Oak Grove Missionary Baptist Church was constructed from the wood of an earlier African-American church that was constructed circa 1870 in the now non-existent J.K. Jones (a.k.a. Jack E. Jones) Community. The one-story wood frame building sits upon concrete block piers and is topped with a jerkin-head roof covered with composition shingles and a hip roofed steeple on the front left of the roof. The original windows remain intact.

South Elevation

The façade of the building faces south and is defined by the centrally located original wooden double doors. Poured concrete steps lead patrons up the doors. The building is fenestrated with two nine-over-nine windows, one on either side of the double doors. The walls are covered with weatherboard and asphalt shingles are found in the gable end. An air vent is located above the doors in the gable end. A cornerstone is located at the southeast edge of the façade. It is the cornerstone from the church in the J.K. Jones Community.

East Elevation

The east elevation is fenestrated with four nine-over-nine windows, a single wood door, and one four-over-four window located on the shed addition. Two different width weatherboards cover the east elevation. Cast concrete steps lead up to the single wood door. A brick chimney is centrally located in the eastern interior of Oak Grove Missionary Baptist Church.

North Elevation

The back of the building includes a shed addition fenestrated with two four-over-four windows. Asphalt shingles are found in the gable end.

West Elevation

The west elevation, going north to south, is fenestrated with one four-over-four window located on the shed addition, one single wood door, four nine-over-nine windows, and one four-over-four window located under the steeple. Cast concrete steps lead up to the single wood door. All four sides of the steeple include air vents.

Sunday School Building

West and laying perpendicular to the church rests a Plain-Traditional style one-story wood frame Sunday school building. This weatherboard and stucco building rests upon cast concrete piers and is topped with a gable roof that is covered with asphalt shingles. The structure was built shortly after the church was constructed.

East Elevation

The façade of the building faces east and is defined by a centrally located metal screened door. Cast concrete steps and a metal rail lead up to the door.

North Elevation

The north elevation is fenestrated with two four-over-four windows.

West Elevation

The west elevation includes a stucco gable addition and a small wooden shed. One six-over-six window is centrally located on the west elevation.

South Elevation

The south elevation, moving west to east, is fenestrated with one small four-over-four window, and two larger four-over-four windows.

Integrity

Since the construction of the church in 1942, the building has undergone few alterations. The gable ends were covered with asphalt shingles, and a shed addition was added to the rear of the church. A stucco gable addition was added to the Sunday school building sometime after its construction. Besides that, the buildings retain all aspects of integrity. The rural setting of the area remains much the same as it did when the building was constructed.

National Register of Historic Places Continuation Sheet

Section number 8 Page 1

SUMMARY

Oak Grove Missionary Baptist Church, located three miles southwest of Blevins, Arkansas, is being nominated to the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion A with local significance as to its association with the J.K. Jones (a.k.a. Jack E. Jones) community and the Arkansas war effort in the 1940s. The church is also being nominated under Criteria Considerations A and B for it being a religious property and removed from its original location. There is a cemetery located adjacent to the church, but is not included in the nomination.

ELABORATION

By the late 1800s, small settlements had developed throughout the gentle rolling hills of Hempstead County. The population was sparse in comparison to the nearby towns of Hope, Blevins, and Washington. In 1866, under the leadership of Rev. London Moore, pastor to the 1st Baptist Church, the Oak Grove Colored Baptist Church was established under a group of trees in the hamlet of a small community that eventually became known as the J.K. Jones Community. Sometime between 1866 and 1870, church members constructed a wood frame building for worship.

The J.K. Jones Community was named after James Kimbrough Jones, an Arkansas Legislator, a United States Representative, and a United States Senator. Jones was a plantation and slave owner who fought with the Confederate Army. However, his views concerning labor and education seem paradoxical in that he believed labor should be organized for the protection of the worker and that educational opportunities should be afforded to all children regardless of class or race.

In 1874, J.K. Jones was admitted to the bar and practiced law in Washington, Arkansas, with his law partner, Daniel Webster Jones, the twentieth governor of Arkansas. J.K. Jones served as a state senator from 1873 to 1879. He was the chairman of the Democratic National Committee in 1896 and 1900. J.K. Jones served as a US Representative from 1881 to 1885. He then served as a US Senator from 1885 to 1903. In 1904, Jones served as the president of the Arkansas History Association, and supported the establishment of the Arkansas History Commission. Jones treated everyone with dignity and respect, regardless of race or social status. B.F. Adair, the only African American in the Arkansas Legislature in the 1880s, seconded the nomination of Jones for US senator.

The Oak Grove Colored Baptist Church served its membership up until the early 1940s. Life changed dramatically for the residents of the J.K. Jones Community due to World War II and the Southwestern Proving Ground. The Southwestern Proving Ground was a War Department project that tested both artillery shells and air bombs within its boundaries of 50,098 acres. People and communities living in that area were forced to relocate in the early 1940s.

The pastor of the Oak Grove Colored Baptist Church, Rev. Marshea Williams, had the church dismantled. On 20 May 1942, G.D. and Eunice Royston sold to the church the following land for $150: commence on the North side of the Washington and Blevins WPA road at the point where the same crosses the east line of the SE 1/3 of Section 31, Township 10 South, Range 24 West, and run thence South 18 1/2 degrees West 600 feet along the North side of said Road to a stake; thence run North parallel with the East line of the SE 1/3 of the SW 1/4 of Section 31, Township 10 South, Range 24 West, 150 feet to a stake; thence run North 18 1/2 degrees East 600 feet to the point of beginning, containing 2 acres of land, more or less.

In 1942, the Oak Grove Colored Baptist Church constructed the current Plain-Traditional wood frame building from the lumber of the original church. Tony Hill and local men were hired as carpenters. The new church building also received a new name, the Oak Grove Missionary Baptist Church. The Oak Grove Missionary Baptist Church remains active as a religious and social facility for its members.
