Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

308 Lamar Street is a two-story, three-bay, Neo-classical Revival frame residence that faces east onto Lamar Street. The hipped roof is framed by tall, outside-end brick chimneys and features three pedimented dormers with dentiled cornice, pilasters, and Palladian window. A dentiled cornice completely encircles all elevations of the house with the projecting center bay of the second-story facade being further elaborated by a modillioned cornice. The house is fronted by a one-story porch that breaks forward in a semi-circle to further define the entrance. The porch is supported by turned columns linked by a turned baluster railing and is altered by the removal of the balustrade from the porch roof. The center-bay first-story entrance consists of double-leaf doors with glazed panels. The second-story entrance is more elaborate with double-leaf, glazed doors set beneath a transom and flanked by sidelights which are themselves framed by wooden panels.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

Constructed around 1910, 308 Lamar Street is a locally important, residential example of Neo-classical Revival architecture that was constructed for the locally prominent Humphries family. Although the downtown area of Greenwood between the Yazoo River and the railroad tracks was once heavily populated with houses of similar quality, most of the houses in the areas immediately surrounding the downtown retail area have been demolished and replaced with new intrusive construction. 308 Lamar Street and the other houses similar to it have become more important in recent years, because so few of them remain to testify to the appearance of downtown Greenwood during the boom period when the city became the important cotton marketing center for the Mississippi Delta region. The exterior integrity of the house is compromised only by the loss of the porch roof balustrade.
