DESCRIBE THE PE	PESENT AND OR	GINAL (if to	OWA) DHVSIC

This is a charming "Gothic" or "Tudor" cottage of a standard American type in the second quarter of the 19th century and inspired by pattern books and examples of A. J. Downing, Richard UpJohn, Calvert Vaux, and others. But there are some individual touches here, that could be considered impurities, but give it a distinctive flavor. The almost classical pediment (but with straight ends) over the openings are an odd combination with the acute-angled gables (all seven of them).

The house is made to seem asymmetrical and "picturesque" by the slightly projecting two-story bay windows on the right wing. The perpendicular placement of the chimneys with corbelled brick trim on the foofline emphasizes the contrast between the more formal hearths in the living room on the right and the less important service areas on the left.

The treatment of the porch is disconcerting: itself symmetrical and three-bayed, it is placed off center so that its right opening does double duty as an entrance. The other two bays serve rooms on the left.

The whole house--certainly the whole second story--is swallowed up in roof, unlike the Georgian, Federal, or Greek Revival where the wall dominates, often to the exclusion of the roof. This is a big house but the architecture diligently evokes "cottage."

In spite of the alterations, where the Victorian trim has been removed from the porch and three-bayed windows, the house retains much of its original flavor.

nomination he said: "He gave voice and strength to the proclamation which struck the shackles from 4,000,000 of his fellow creatures. The merciless slave driver tremblingly read it by the flash of his victorious cannon. He pinned it on the breast of murderous treason with a million loyal bayonets." Bradley was one of the famous 306 delegates who voted for 37 ballots for General U. S. Grant for a third term in the Republican National Convention held in Chicago in 1880.

Bradley was elected Governor of Kentucky in 1896 by a margin of 8,919 votes. He had the honor of being the first Republican elected to this position in Kentucky. When his term expired, he moved to Louisville, thus leaving the Garrard County home he had lived in for approximately thirty years. While Governor, Bradley went to Chickamauga Battlefield in 1899 to dedicate Kentucky's monument and used these words: "It is equally true that those who were fortunately defeated were inspired by sincere devotion to principles conscientiously believed to be just; . . . and their heroic suffering and bravery entitle them to the admiration of all mankind." One can easily see the contrast between this speech and his nomination of Grant: one breathing fire of eloquence and "waving the bloody shirt" and the second breathing a sweet eloquence of a reunited country.

Bradley was elected three times as a member of the Republican National Committee from Kentucky. In 1896 Bradley's name was put in nomination by the Kentucky delegation to the Republican Convention for President of the United States. His name was many times voted for in the Republican National Convention for President.

Bradley was truly the Father of the Republican Party in Kentucky and the first Republican in Kentucky to hold both the Office of Governor and Senator. Ollie M. James, Democratic Senator from Kentucky, upon his death in 1914 said: "He was a distinguished lawyer, a great orator, and a profound Statesman."
