NARRATIVE DESCRIPTION

Summary Paragraph

The Alexander Teen Center is located in the south east section of Brookhaven, MS at 456 Rogers Street in a mixed commercial and residential neighborhood adjacent to Alexander Junior High School. It is a masonry, one-story building with a front-facing gable roof covered with asphalt shingles. The building is simple box construction that rests on a concrete foundation with brick veneer. The gymnasium floor structural system consists of wooden beams supported by brick columns. The walls are constructed of hollow clay tile blocks. The dimensions of the gym are approximately 95' x 70' facing east toward the west side of Alexander Junior High School.

Narrative Description

Completed in 1947, the building faces east. Originally two sets of double leaf wood doors under wood canopies allowed access to the gymnasium floor. The doors flanked four single-fixed pane glass windows with brick lintels and sills. All windows had sills constructed of thin bricks in a soldier course placed horizontally. The brick lintels were constructed a series of thin bricks in a soldier course, set on edge. The window openings are currently boarded. A large exhaust fan with louvered vents is placed in the front facing gable. In the 1980s a one-story frame office was built on the exterior of the building covering the south door.

The south side of the building has nine single fixed-pane windows with the same brick lintels and sills. These are believed to be replacements windows. The original windows were metal-frame industrial type windows. Toward the west end concrete stairs with a steel railing rise to a concrete landing. A single fiberglass/metal door, probably a replacement, allows access to the gymnasium floor.

The west side (rear) has one window opening and a wooden door that allows access to the ground floor.

The north side has eleven single fixed-pane sheet glass windows. These have the same brick decorative features and are not the original. Offset to the west is a concrete stair with a steel railing that rises to a concrete landing. A single door allows access to the gymnasium floor. Immediately to the east a door at grade allows access to the ground floor. To the east of that door is a single window lighting the ground floor.

The interior of the main floor is a large open space. The ceiling of plywood sheets rises to a gable where wood purlins are strengthened by purlin trusses. Steel beams provide additional support. The walls are hollow clay tiles and the windows are set high in the walls. The floor is wood. The original metal backboards are still in use.

The ground floor was used to house the locker rooms, equipment room, storage area, restrooms and showers. It has concrete floors, and what remains of the clay tile blocks marking the shower and restroom area. The locker room area was once lined by wooden lockers on the east, north and south wall. Originally there were two ways to access the downstairs area from the gym floor. The main route was through the exit in the rear of the north wall and entering the ground floor from the outside. A "trap" door in the floor was located in the north out-of-bounds area near the middle of the gymnasium.

Contractor R. A. Barnes was originally in charge of the construction project; however, some of the work was completed by the school shop class. In the late 1980s an office area was added on to the front of the building with one set of doors being closed in.

Presently the gym is in good structural condition. Although a restoration process was begun in 2005, much care has been taken to preserve as much historic integrity as possible. Modern alterations include adding bath rooms on the gym floor level. The gymnasium floor had to be completely replaced with new wood materials because of damage sustained from age and insects.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

SUMMARY PARAGRAPH

The Alexander Teen Center Brookhaven, Lincoln County MS is locally significant under Criterion A in association with Entertainment and Recreation, Education and Ethnic Heritage/Black. The period of significance is from 1947, when the gym was built on property adjacent to the Alexander High School, to 1959, fifty years before this nomination.

Brookhaven like many Mississippi towns maintained separate school facilities for white students and African-American students. The Brookhaven Colored School's first principal was Professor Prince Cameron, of whom we can find very little history. Professor Cameron was succeeded by Professor P. D. Gulledge in 1891; he served for some 42 years until 1933. The first Brookhaven Colored School was ravaged by fire in the early 1920s. In the late 1920s a two story building housing grades 1-10 was built in a section of town called "Little Italy." The school name changed to "Gulledge School" in honor of Professor Gulledge.

In 1933, Mr. A. A. Alexander became principal of Gulledge School. Alexander was raised in rural Lincoln County where he attended a one-room school. At the age of 19, he entered Jackson College as a ninth-grade student and remained there until 1928 when he graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree in science and education. He received a Masters degree in Education from Northwestern University in 1952. Mr. Alexander served as Dean at Central Mississippi College in Kosciusko and taught at Lanier High School in Jackson before coming to Brookhaven. He served as Principal of the Brookhaven Colored School, later named Alexander High School in his honor, from 1933 to 1958. Under his administration, a new campus and facility was erected through the Works Progress Administration.

In 1937, also under the administration of Mr. A. A. Alexander, the school's first PTA was established. Alexander High School, being in the Seventh Educational District, was among the poorest schools in the district. Mr. Alexander had the vision of a gymnasium and he was able to get a plot of land where he could get one built adjacent to the campus. Mr. Alexander, along with H.T. Evans, C.E. Johnson, E.S. Reed and P.T.A. president Cecil Brown began to devise a plan to make the gym a reality. After securing a loan and accepting donations from the local community, work on a new gymnasium was ready to begin. Contractor R.A. Barnes was enlisted to begin work on the gym and later some of the work was completed by students in the shop class. In 1947, the all black Alexander High School became the proud owner of the first indoor full-court gymnasium (Alexander PTA Recreation Center), built for blacks in the Seventh Educational District. Very soon the gym became known as the Alexander "Teen Center". The Teen Center would become "the" gymnasium for black schools in the area. Alexander as well as other schools from surrounding areas were able to enjoy the gym. The gym was used for a wide range of activities such as physical education class, science fair display area, school band concerts, Junior and Senior proms, and "sock-hops" just to name a few. Prior to the erection of this building all basketball games were played outdoors¹. In 1952 fire destroyed the Alexander High School main building. The gym, along with other temporary buildings, became classrooms until 1956 when a new School building was erected. In 1960 a new gymnasium was built on the campus of Alexander High School.

Brookhaven residents educated at Alexander High School have many fond memories of the Alexander Teen Center, both as an educational and social facility.

The gym (Teen Center) was our gym. We had physical education class there and downstairs was the locker room with showers and bath rooms. We had basketball games and tournaments, schools came from McComb, Monticello, Meridian and other places. I do remember Jackson State (College) and Alcorn playing there. I don't remember the years, maybe late 40's or early 50's.

Mrs. Johnette (Tillman) Holloway Alexander High School Class of '52

Mr. Alexander rejected the idea of the school board erecting a, "gymnasium," which would be like a cafeteria, gym and auditorium all rolled into one. This would require moving tables and chairs around for programs, basketball games and other events. He instead, had the vision of a gymnasium and he was able to get a plot of land where he could get one built adjacent to the campus. Mr. Alexander, along with H.T. Evans, C.E. Johnson, E.S. Reed and P.T.A. president Cecil Brown began to devise a plan to make the gym a reality. Contractor R.A. Barnes was enlisted to begin work on the gym and later some of the work was completed by students in the shop class. The "Teen Center" would become the first indoor full-court gymnasium for black schools in an area that spanned from Louisiana to Tennessee. Alexander as well as other schools in the surrounding area to include Jackson State (Jackson College) and Alcorn State (Alcorn A&M College) would use the gym to play games and host tournaments.

Mr. Jessie Buie Alexander High School Class of '47
Principal, Alexander High School 1960-1970

I remember Mrs. Cecil Brown (President of PTA) going to the Bank with Mr. Alexander to try to get a loan to help pay for the cost of having the gym built. For a long time it was the only gym in the area for black schools. Teams from all around would come to Brookhaven to play because Mr. Alexander would allow other schools to host their games in the gym. I remember Jackson State (Jackson College) and Alcorn State (Alcorn A&M College) playing there a few times although I can't remember the years, but I'm almost certain that it was in the 1950's.

Mrs. Josie (Byrd) Hightower Alexander High School Class of '60

We had P.E. class in the gym; we would display our science fair exhibits in the gym as well as have the Jr. and Sr. Prom and "sock-hop." This was the only gym for black schools in the area. We had so many basketball games at the "Teen Center." I remember colleges even playing in the gym around the years 1951 and 1952.

Mrs. Dorothy (Burge)Watkins Alexander High School Class of '51

At a time when the opportunity for access to athletic facilities for African-American students was legally and socially restricted, the Alexander Teen Center was a haven for black youth. In the Brookhaven area, this was the only full-court indoor facility for basketball, volleyball and other athletic events. Built with private funds raised by the PTA, the Alexander Teen Center represents the efforts that African American parents took to provide opportunities to their children.

A similar facility is located in Picayune, Mississippi, the Picayune Colored Gymnasium. Built in 1930 by local businessmen, the two-story cinder-block building housed the only indoor full-sized basketball court available to African-Americans on the Gulf Coast in the 1930s and 1940s. Today the Picayune Colored Gymnasium is in very poor condition due to years of deferred maintenance and damage from Hurricane Katrina.

The Alexander Teen Center is historically significant to the Brookhaven area, especially to African-Americans since it is the only building remaining that can be directly associated with the "original" Alexander High School. The building maintains its integrity with only minor alterations.
