OAKDALE DISTRICT

The Oakdale District is a residential district comprised of 31 residential structures and one non-contributing structure. The boundaries are: the alley south of Terrace Park on the north, W. Kenton Avenue on the south, Southern Pkwy. on the east, and 4th St. and the first alley west of Southern Pkwy. on the west. (See map and verbal boundary description.)

The building type within the Oakdale District is basically a two-and-one-half-story vernacular brick residence and all built between 1905 and 1910. All but one of these structures face Southern Parkway. Of these, seventeen are identical duplexes. Their design consists of a gabled facade, layered cornice, a small attic-story window, three second-floor windows and one large window with a transom light on the first floor. The entry is arched with a pair of doors. Porches were added ca. 1920. Nine of the remaining fourteen are also two-and-one-half-story brick residences with various decorative elements added. Four frame bungalows sit together at the same setback of the previously mentioned buildings on the north end of Southern Parkway. A very handsome brick veneer bungalow faces the southern boundary of the district, at 415 W. Kenton and is a contributing structure to the district. 3845 Southern Parkway is a later brick veneer residence which does not contribute to the district.

Oakdale was one of the first suburbs to owe its growth directly to the Grand Blvd. The first subdivision platted in Oakdale was Oakdale Addition, within which this district lies. The Oakdale Addition was recorded in 1899. The electric trolley lines were extended out 3rd St. and greatly added to the accessibility of the new development. It was ultimately, however, the $2.4 million construction of new shops at the South Louisville Yards of the L&N Railroads in 1902 which provided the incentive for serious residential development. Many of the residences in the district were originally occupied by L&N employees, and most were built as duplexes, rental property.

The construction type and setback of the residences in the Oakdale district create a cohesive pocket of architectural quality. The development of the brick duplexes was designed in such a way as to provide a wholesome residential environment for the tenants. The blocks surrounding this district have undergone radical alterations, and retain less architectural integrity.

This district is important to Louisville at large, not only because of its impact on the development of South Louisville, but because it is one of the best extant examples of turn-of-the-century rental developments in the city.

The Oakdale District is approximately 4 acres. The UTM coordinate is: 16-608000-4228500

VERBAL BOUNDARY DESCRIPTION

Beginning at a point in the northwest corner of Southern Parkway and Kenton Avenue, thence westwardly following the north right-of-way line of Kenton Avenue 200' to a point in the northeast corner of Kenton and the first alley west of Southern Parkway, thence northwardly following the east right-of-way-line of said alley to its intersection of 4th Street, thence northeastwardly following the southeast right-of-way line of 4th Street to a point in the southeast corner of said street and the first alley south of Terrace Park, thence east following the south right-of-way line of said alley to a point in the southwest corner of said alley and Southern Parkway, thence southwardly following the west right-of-way line of Southern Parkway to the point of beginning.

The boundaries were so drawn to include the residential development described above and to exclude surrounding developments which have deteriorated over the years and do not retain the architectural integrity which is evident within the Oakdale District.
