1217

A black and white photograph of a house's front entrance. The house features a prominent porch with two large, square columns. Each column is topped with a decorative, carved capital. The porch is supported by a wide, flat roof. Above the central doorway, the number '1217' is mounted. The entrance consists of a dark door with a vertical glass panel, flanked by two side panels, each also featuring a vertical glass insert. A set of four concrete steps leads up to the porch. To the left of the steps, a dark metal railing is visible. The house has horizontal siding. On either side of the porch, there are windows with decorative white balustrades. The overall style is reminiscent of early 20th-century American architecture.
