Architecture;

Wa-B-10. An unusual blend of Greek and Gothic Revival elements, this house is based on an H-plan, a rare type of plan in the state. The picturesque roof forms-- there are ten gables, three on each of the main faces and two on each of the sides-- have given the house its popular name, while the location near the historic core of Bowling Green and the kinship of its original owner with the city's founder have made the house a well known landmark.
