National Register of Historic Places
Continuation SheetSection number 7 Page 1Description

During the Railroad Era (1870-1914) in White County a variety of vernacular houses were constructed. They were also built out of a variety of materials. Surviving examples from this period, however, are somewhat limited. The L.D. Hutchinson House is a fine example of a one and one-half-story T-shaped building that is of frame construction and clad with novelty siding. The gable roof is covered with composition shingles and the entire structure rests on a stone foundation.

Located on the east side of State Road 31 and less than one-quarter mile north of County Road 147, this building was constructed in the crossroad community of Floyd. The L.D. Hutchinson House was constructed in 1914, and is in excellent condition. Its main, or west, elevation is dominated by a one-story shed roof porch that extends all of the way around the building and terminates on the southeast corner of the structure. The porch roof is supported by turned posts that are decorated with wooden brackets.

Fenestration on the ground floor of the original house consists of symmetrically placed one-over-one double-hung wood sash windows. The single front door enters into a central hall that divides the front two rooms into fifteen by fifteen foot squares. Single doors that also open onto the porch are found on the south and east elevations of the building. Directly above the main entrance to the house is a gable roof dormer that is fenestrated with a pair of small one-over-one double-hung windows. A larger one-over-one double-hung sash window is found in the upper portion of the southern gable end. Similar, although smaller windows flank the upper portion of the cut stone chimney on the north elevation of the structure. A similar chimney was located at the eastern terminus of the main building; it has since been removed and replaced by a one-over-one double-hung sash window.

The only other alteration to the building is found on the northeast portion of the house. An open ell-shaped porch was originally situated here but it has since been enclosed and clad with novelty siding. Fenestration on the east and northwest sides of the addition consists of one-over-one double-hung aluminum sash windows. The northwest portion of the porch was enclosed when outhouses were no longer necessary. A single door exits the north elevation of the enclosed porch and four fixed frame ribbon windows are located just west of the door.

Significance

L.D. Hutchinson was a locally prominent citizen in the Floyd community. He operated the general store which supplied many of the local farmers and his store also doubled as the post office. Hutchinson also operated a steam powered sawmill and steam powered cotton gin and he also owned several farms that had been foreclosed on.

When this house was constructed in 1914, it was one of numerous T-shaped buildings built during the Railroad Era (1870-1914). Even though there are eighty-three of these buildings still left in the county very few exhibit the amount of integrity found in the L.D. Hutchinson House. For this reason it is being nominated under Criterion C with local significance.

Reviewer's Comments

The boundaries of this property are presently located along building lines. A resource listed in the National Register should include all features of the property which contribute to its significance. In almost all cases this includes its historic setting. Page 77 of National Register Bulletin 16, Guidelines for Completing National Register of Historic Places Forms, states that "the boundaries of buildings should include the land surrounding the building, unless the lot occupied by the building contains no surrounding land as in the central business district of most cities."

Please revise the boundaries to include the property historically associated with the resource. If a portion of the original setting has lost its integrity, please explain.
