The Coosa County Jail is the oldest remaining stone jail in the state and is one of only a few structures which date to the early period of the county's history.

Coosa County was created by the legislature on December 18, 1832 from lands included in the Creek Indian Treaty of Cusseta. Originally Lexington was chosen as the County Seat, but in January of 1835 the seat was moved to Rockford.

In August of 1839 the County Commissioners Court authorized the reception of bids for a stone jail building. The contract was let to A. Lyle in January of the following year. This contract was forfeited and on March 22, 1841, a contract was made with Miller and Heard to build the jail for $2,745.00. The building was completed in August, 1842.

The building continued to be used as a county jail until 1938, and has been used to store a portion of the county records since that date.
