Description

Summary Paragraph (Briefly describe the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, type, style, method of construction, setting, size, and significant features. Indicate whether the property has historic integrity.)

The one-story Citizens State Bank building is located in Creston, Nebraska, on the north side of Pine Street between 2nd and 3rd Streets. Located in Platte County, Creston is approximately twenty miles north of Columbus, Nebraska, and ninety miles northwest of Omaha, Nebraska's largest city. The Citizens State Bank is part of several buildings that make up the original business district, or "Main Street," of Creston. Immediately to the east of the bank, and sharing a common wall, is the Lion's Club, a light brown brick one-story building built in the early 1900s. The remainder of the north side of the block between 2nd and 3rd Streets consists primarily of one-story brick buildings. With the exception of various storefront modifications, the block remains as a largely intact commercial block from the early 1900s. The south side of the block contains structures built during the late 1970s into the mid-1990s, and one period commercial building that has been extensively altered.

The most architecturally notable building on this block, and arguably within the village of Creston, is the Citizens State Bank. The 26' by 80' brick and clay tile Beaux Arts-style building is clad in terra cotta with several decorative pieces, such as lion's heads and colorful swags. The exterior of the bank looks relatively the same as it did historically, with the exception of a window on the west side that has been converted to a door. The interior retains its historic floor plan, but the majority of its finishings have been removed.

Narrative Description (Describe the historic and current physical appearance and condition of the property. Describe contributing and noncontributing resources if applicable.)

EXTERIOR

Front (South Façade)

The primary (south) façade of this one-story bank is faced with glazed architectural terra cotta. The centrally placed main entrance is recessed and flanked on each side by one column and three pilasters. Within the grouping of the column and pilasters, an original ten-light window remains on both sides of the entrance. The entry door is no longer intact; the opening has been boarded up to fill the void. Although the door is no longer extant, a large, arched transom of leaded glass remains atop this entry. Original leaded sidelights, consisting of twelve lights each, remain intact on either side of the door opening. A large arch, supported by the columns and pilasters, extends over the entrance creating a Palladian effect. Plain medallions flank either side of the arch, and a multi-colored leaf and scroll adorn the keystone. The underside of the arch contains recessed blue-green panels: eight rectangular and one square, the latter of which held a light fixture. Original hexagonal mosaic tiles remain on the entry floor within the recess. The primary tile field is white with a black outline and red geometric border. "C.S.B." is spelled out in black tiles in the center of the white field.

The eastern and western sides of this façade each contain a small window with a flat pediment lintel. These windows appear to rest on the base of the building. Above each window is a yellow lion's head surrounded by a blue-green garland, in line with the bright keystone of the entry arch. Originally, a large clock was located underneath the lion's head on the western side. It was removed at an unknown time, likely sometime between the closing of the bank and the remodeling of the building into a meat locker in the late 1940s. Moving up the façade, the words "Citizens State Bank" are visible below the accentuated cornice with decorative brackets and dentils. Each bracket consists of stylized flowers and leaves. A parapet containing a centrally placed horizontal panel with low-relief overlapping blue, green and gold circles is flanked by colorful swags and caps the building.

Side (West Façade)

The west façade is also clad in white glazed architectural terra cotta, and the accentuated cornice adorned by decorative brackets and dentils from the main façade is continued. This façade is divided into three bays, with the middle bay projecting slightly and containing the more decorative elements: the multi-colored terra cotta. The majority of the windows are contained within this bay. Each window is covered with plywood, but an intact original double-hung, one-over-one window with operable transom is present in most openings. The middle three windows are arranged as a unit and are slightly recessed. The southernmost window of this bay was converted to a door in the early 1960s. The horizontal band of overlapping circles from the main façade is repeated on either side of the middle window, with the exception that the circles are now in a vertical band. A colorful horizontal panel with low-relief floral carving rests above each window. Swags and wreaths encircling a stylized branch mark the ends of the bay. A centrally-placed golden eagle resting on a green bundle of sticks adorns the parapet. As on the main façade, "Citizens State Bank" is carved under the accentuated cornice.

The converted door of the middle bay, which is the current useable entry, is composed of plywood. A small wooden deck with two stairs allows access to this door. The deck is not original to the building, but was constructed when this doorway was created, for use as a loading dock for the bags of feed stored in the building at the time.

The original entrance of this façade, which provided direct access to the community room, is located in the northern bay. The original door no longer remains, and the opening is filled with plywood; however, its decorative pediment remains. In balance to this doorway, the southern bay of the façade contains a double-hung one-over-one wooden window with an operable transom. A small cornice with dentils tops the window. Each end of these outer bays is decorated with alternating large and small quoins, which further distinguishes them from the central bay.

Rear (North Façade)

The rear of the building is not faced in terra cotta, with the exception of the western corner, which contains just a small portion wrapped around from the west façade. The stretcher-bond, common brown brick façade has virtually no decoration, with the exception of three evenly spaced windows. Window openings are arched with a lintel of three courses of rowlock brick. Each window has been partially in-filled on the bottom two-thirds by red brick laid in a quarter-bond pattern. When in-filled, each window received a new poured concrete sill. Original concrete sills (from the original, larger window openings) and historic window frames remain on two of the three windows; the portion of the building containing the third window opening (western side of the façade) is badly deteriorated. The brick infill and sill of this window have been removed, and a cut-to-fit piece of corrugated metal now fills the opening. No glass remains in any of the window openings of this facade.

INTERIOR

The interior layout is mainly true to its original bank configuration. The lobby remains just inside the main entrance, with the ladies' restroom to the east of the lobby and the gentlemen's restroom to the west, although both now empty of fixtures. Spaces occupied by the community room and daytime vault are located at the back of the building, along with a set of original wooden stairs that lead to the basement. Between the community room and daytime vault are another set of wooden stairs leading up to the banker's office on the mezzanine level. The office consists of two spaces, one on each the northern and southern halves of the mezzanine. Upon ascending the stairs, one enters the southern space. This room has a large opening that looks down onto the main bank floor and an intact skylight that adds natural light to this level of the building. This room also contains the northern-most window of the west façade. The northern space, which contains the three partially in-filled windows of the northern façade, is only accessible via a large opening in the northern wall of the southern room.

The basement contains a large area of open space and two rooms that originally had doors, one of which is believed to have held the more secure vault, though the vault door has been removed. The basement walls are brick, and the floor is poured concrete.

Unfortunately, the teller counters, ceiling, and light fixtures were removed sometime before the building's rehabilitation into a meat locker in the late 1940s. The interior of the building does, however, retain the original mahogany window trim and white marble hexagonal floor tile, although some of the tile has been covered with concrete that may or may not be possible to remove. Some of the original lathe and plaster remain on the walls, although its condition is poor. Period light switches and electrical outlets remain.

FUTURE PLANS

The Citizens State Bank is under new ownership, and the current owner plans to rehabilitate the structure. Rehabilitation plans are primarily focused on the retention and restoration of the terra cotta exterior.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Citizens State Bank building is eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places at the local level under Criterion A for its association with Commerce and banking in Nebraska. The prosperity of the Citizens State Bank, as witnessed by the construction of the beautiful 1920 building, and its sudden failure in 1931, displays the continually changing atmosphere of banking in the early twentieth century. The bank is also eligible under Criterion C as an excellent example of the Beaux Arts style and the utilization of glazed architectural terra cotta. Truly, a piece of art, the Citizens State Bank is the most architecturally prominent building in Creston.

The period of significance begins with the construction of the Citizens State Bank in 1920 and ends with the closing of the bank in 1931.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

Background

Settlers began arriving in Platte County's Creston Township in the early 1880s. They established churches, schools, and cemeteries as the little community grew. Creston was officially named on August 28, 1886, with incorporation in 1890. The first census was conducted that same year with a count of 200 residents. The first train reached Creston late in 1886. Also in 1886, a drugstore opened, followed by hotels, grain elevators and a mill, meat markets, saloons, general stores, harness shops, a newspaper, a hospital, and even a swimming pool.¹ The first bank opened in 1887. A second, known as the Creston State Bank, opened in 1898. It was sold to new owners in 1901, and became the Citizens State Bank, the subject of this nomination. In 1931, the Citizens State Bank, along with many other banks across the country, closed due to financial unrest caused by the 1929 stock market crash.²

Criterion A: Commerce

The Banking System from 1889 to 1940

Nebraska passed its first general regulatory banking law in 1889. This created the "dual system," whereby state and national banks operate side by side under state and federal regulation, which is used today. This law was expanded in 1895 to include more regulation, minimum reserves, and regular bank examinations. According to the Historic Context Report, The Age of Main Street Banking: The Dual System in Nebraska (1889-1920), the 1890s "was a mixed period for Nebraska banking."³ Financial panics, droughts, and low agricultural prices caused distress and failure to many state and national banks. However, by the late 1890s, a new optimism, enhanced by a revision in the national banking laws, resulted in the creation and reorganization of banks across the nation. The number of state banks almost doubled between 1909 and 1920.⁴ Following the financial panic of 1907, reforms of the national monetary system were introduced and progress was made in state deposit guaranty. However, after World War I, agricultural prosperity and expansion would decline, leading to an agricultural depression in the 1920s. State banks where assets were tied up in real estate and crop mortgages were particularly hard hit during this period.⁵ According to the Historic Context Report, The Nebraska Banking System is Tried: Agriculture and Economic Distress (1920-1940), the 1920s and 1930s were "the two most difficult decades in Nebraska banking history."⁶ The country had enjoyed the economic prosperity brought by World War I's agricultural demands. Farmers purchased additional land to meet the agricultural needs and reaped the high crop prices. However, when demand fell in the early 1920s, farmers were left with high mortgages. To try to pay the mortgage, they had to sell crops at reduced values. Without loan payments being made, many banks were forced to close. The situation only worsened when the stock market crashed in 1929, causing hundreds of banks to close nation-wide. The population's confidence in banks was lost until President

¹ Opened in 1919, Creston's swimming pool is believed to be the oldest operating outdoor pool in the state.

Franklin D. Roosevelt led the creation of the FDIC in 1933, which served as a guarantee to depositors that their money would be safe in banks.⁷

Banking in Creston

The Creston State Bank was established in November of 1898⁸ by brothers C.F. and H.P. Buhmann.⁹ While not the first bank in Creston, it was opened during a prime time in American banking, as discussed above. New reforms and restored faith in the economy allowed for such an economic venture. In 1901, just a few years later, the bank was sold to P.E. McKillip, O. E. Engler, and E. T. Graham. The new owners quickly renamed it "Citizens State Bank".¹⁰ As an indication of the bank's success, in March of that year the owners purchased lot 15 in block 5 to build a new building, not yet the subject of this nomination. The bank changed hands again in November 1903, with Samuel T. Fleming, E. T. Graham, E. R. Gurney and other parties taking ownership. This new arrangement proved successful with deposits reaching $550,000 by 1918, increasing by $520,000 since 1903.¹¹ The Citizens State Bank was clearly thriving during this time.

As evidence of their commitment to the community, in June of 1916, the Citizens State Bank installed a two-sided "Town Clock" on the main facade of their building. According to the Creston Centennial History, the clock was installed "in appreciation to all patrons and people in town. The bank felt the clock would be a benefit to all, and an improvement to the town."¹² From then on, they were known as "the bank with the clock." In 1920, this clock would be transferred to the new building, which is the subject of this nomination.

Citizens State Bank: "The Most Modern and Up-to-Date Bank..."

In 1920, Citizens State Bank began building their second new building on lots 17 and 18 in block 5. The bank's growth was so great that plans for the new building were discussed before World War I, but due to the war, were postponed.¹³ According to a news article in The Columbus Telegram, "The new building...is one of the most modern and up-to-date in the state."¹⁴ To design the nearly $50,000 building, they hired Frederick W. Clarke of Omaha, with Frank Bellows from Walthill, Nebraska, serving as the contractor/builder.¹⁵ In the afternoon and evening of Friday, February 11, 1921, a grand opening was held to welcome the community to the new building. The announcement in The Creston Statesman on Friday, February 4, 1921 states:

"Among its special features are a community room in the rear of the bank, especially designed for the use of the general public, and a ladies' rest room in the front of the building, arranged for their comfort and use.... Owners of the building are believers in reciprocity, and feel that because they have prospered it is only right that they should do their part in the progress of the community by building a banking home which would be a credit to the village, and a real convenience to their patrons and the public generally...."¹⁶

According to the Creston Centennial History, the reason the ladies' restroom was stressed was "because this was the only business in town at that time that had separate rest rooms for the ladies and gentlemen."¹⁷

On the day of the grand opening, guests were treated to gifts, refreshments, and entertainment. A Creston Statesman February 18, 1921 article states:

“Those who called received a souvenir – to the men a cigar and a clever pocket pencil designed to represent a large caliber rifle shell, to the ladies a small mirror and to the children a wooden whistle. In the basement hot sandwiches and coffee were served. And up stairs (sic.) a large Victrola entertained visitors.... Not satisfied with the liberal entertainment during the afternoon, the officers invited the entire community to round out the day at the K.P. (Knights of Pythias) Hall for a big dance.”¹⁸

The bank’s efforts did not go unnoticed. As elaborated in the same newspaper article written after the grand opening:

“The eagerness with which this institution tried to show the community a good time is only synonymous with the desire they have of serving the public in square and fair banking business and transactions. The interest they have in our town and surrounding territory is exemplified in the erection of their new home which is a monument of lasting and the pride of us all.”¹⁹

Built during Creston’s peak population of 381, the bank did very well in its new home, and even seemed to be growing, merging with Creston’s Farmers State Bank in November 1923.²⁰ Although the bank continued to do well when other banks were buckling under the agricultural depression of the early 1920s, prosperity would not last. The bank closed just ten years after the opening of its new building. The Citizens State Bank, the only bank in Creston at the time, was not able to endure the 1929 stock market crash and Great Depression. On June 1, 1931, the bank announced its closing, with deposits totaling $185,000.²¹

Criterion C: Architecture

The Beaux Arts style, named after the French school of architecture, the Ecole des Beaux-Arts, emerged in the United States in the late 19th century. Buildings of this style have extensive exterior decorative details and lavish interiors to deliver a symbolic expression of wealth and civic pride. Formal symmetry, Italian Renaissance form, and classical Greek and Roman decorative elements are all utilized in the Beaux Arts style to create an impressive architectural declaration.²² Typically, buildings of the Beaux Arts style were architect-designed and built as a mark of prosperity.²³ The Citizens State Bank is an excellent example. Features representing the Beaux Arts style include the symmetrical façade, arched entrance flanked by columns, the decorative cornice, and several colorful decorative swags and garlands. Truly, a beautiful, ornate building, the chosen style signifies a prominent time in the history of the bank.

Along with the opulent style, the use of glazed architectural terra cotta on two prominent façades of the Citizens State Bank creates a noteworthy building. Promoted as a water-proof, fire-proof, and economical building material, glazed architectural terra cotta was significant in the development of the Chicago School and the Beaux Arts styles in the United States. By using molds, terra cotta pieces allowed for faster and cheaper ornamental detailing than carved stone. Additionally, a variety of colors could be used on a single piece. Thus, with terra-cotta one could have the rich ornamental details of carved stonework, with considerable savings.

Glazed architectural terra cotta was popular from the late 19th century to the 1930s. A shift in architectural tastes and rising production costs led to its decline.²⁴ The terra cotta used on the Citizens State Bank was produced by the American Terra Cotta and Ceramic Company out of Crystal Lake, Illinois.

The Beaux Arts style and an extensive use of glazed architectural terra cotta is not common in much of small-town Nebraska. According to a search of the Nebraska State Historic Preservation Office (NeSHPO) records, only a handful of Beaux Arts style buildings are recorded in the State, the majority of which are county courthouses. NeSHPO records indicate that only three other small towns have Beaux Arts style banks (Callaway, Comstock, and North Bend). The North Bend bank is also clad in glazed architectural terra cotta, and while an attractive building, it is not as elaborately adorned as the Citizens State Bank in Creston. Creston's bank is somewhat of an oddity for small towns across Nebraska; it is a very grand structure for such a small town.

The Architect:

The bank was designed by Frederick W. Clarke. He, at times in partnership with his brother Edwin, designed several buildings in Nebraska, particularly in Omaha. Clarke was largely known for his work with Omaha Public Schools. Two of the schools he designed in Omaha are listed as Omaha Landmarks and are on the National Register of Historic Places: Vinton School (1908, Tudor Revival) and Rosewater School (1910, Second Renaissance Revival). In addition to Vinton and Rosewater, he also designed Rose Hill School (1916, Collegiate Gothic), Clifton Hill School (1917, Late Gothic Revival), Technical High School (1921, Neo-Classical Revival), and Sherman School (1926, Eclectic). As witnessed by these school commissions, Clarke's designs utilized a multitude of styles. His use of the Beaux Arts style for the Citizens State Bank highlighted his talent as an architect as well as created a lasting impression upon the small town of Creston.

Additional Historic Information:

According to Platte County deed records, Citizens State Bank continued to own the building until 1940. At this time, due to a tax foreclosure, it was sold by public auction to the Village of Creston for $102.50. After the bank closed in 1931, the building was used as a grocery store, meat locker plant, and possibly a furniture store.²⁵ In 1946, Emil Motyeka and his wife bought the building. Emil then deeded the building to his son Emil T. and wife, Meta H. Motyeka, in 1950. According to local stories, the Motyekas used the building as a meat locker plant. In 1964, Farmers Co-operative Oil Company bought the building, and it continued to be owned by a co-op until 2005. The co-ops generally used the building for feed storage.

At the time of Creston's Centennial in 1990, the Co-op owned the building and used it as a feed-storage shed. Norman Osten, who worked at the Co-op at the time, along with his family and friends, painted and "spruced up" the entrance and a section of the interior, just a few yards inside the entrance, to recreate an old bank scene for a Centennial celebration exhibit. This is the last time improvements were made to the building, which has remained empty since the Co-op closed in 2005.

Hi Jeff,

I suggested just removing the continuation sheets so it would be less work on your part, but if you're willing to go in and remove specific images, that would be great! Here is what needs to be removed:

Ottawa Block: Figures 10-12

Citizens State Bank: Figures 4-7

All of the images for Omaha Park & Boulevard System and Bethphage Mission are owned by the property owners, and we have full permission to use them online.

Thank you for doing this, and I promise that I'll have the images removed before I send them to you next time!

Audrey

Do you need the embedded images from the continuation sheets for all of these removed? (For example on the Nottingham Apts, pages pdf pages 18 and 19 (figures 3 and 4) are of an old newspaper advertisement and a 1925 photo?

Please let me know, if you need all of these types of images removed from all of these files. I can remove them, then send copies to you and Jim to ensure that everyone knows what is for public accessibility.

Hi Jim,

I just realized that the nominations that were just listed are now available on the NPS website (even though my computer is not letting me download them). We had a few photos that we are removing from the nominations when we put them on our website because we only received "academic" permission to use the photos, not internet permission. Could you please remove the continuation sheets from what you have posted so that the permission is not violated? We will not include these photos in future submissions, but will rather simply reference them in the bibliography.

Thanks,

Audrey
