DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Vincennes Historic District is bounded on the north by the Wabash River, on the east by the center line of College Avenue (formerly Hickman), on the south by the center line of Eleventh Street to the center line of Hart Street, then the center line of Hart Street south to the center line of the continuation of Eleventh Street, then southwest along the center line of Eleventh Street to the center line of Willow Street, and then on the center line of Willow Street to the Wabash.

Included within this area are several distinct sections that relate to the development of the town containing examples of different architectural styles covering over 100 years of growth.

1. The site of the early Piankeshaw Indian Village: Although no physical evidence exists today, part or all of it was certainly contained within the district.
2. The Riverfront area bounded on the north by the Wabash, on the east by Scott Street, on the south by First Street, and on the west by Willow: This area contains the William Henry Harrison Mansion "Grouseland", 1804 (a National Historic Landmark), the riverfront with several mid-19th Century warehouses and commercial buildings, the site of the first steamboat landing, and the George Rogers Clark National Memorial (on the National Register) near or on the site of Fort Sackville: At the eastern end of this area are two very early and historically important structures: one, the Indiana Territorial Capital Memorial (on the National Register) (moved to present location in the 1950's) which was constructed in this area in 1800, and second, a newly discovered French Creole Cottage, The Brouillet House (c. 1790). The site of Fort Knox I (1787) is located in this area. Elihu Stout's Print shop was located near the original site of the Territorial Capital which was originally in this area. The Indiana Gazette, later the Western Sun, the first Indiana newspaper, began operation in this office near the original location of the capital in 1804. A reproduction Stout's Shop has been included in the Territorial Capital State Memorial. Vincennes University, the oldest institution of higher learning west of the Alleghenies and north of the Ohio River was originally located on the riverfront not too far from "Grouseland". Established in 1801 as Jefferson Academy, in 1806 they requested and received part of the one township that congress had granted for higher education in Indiana in 1804. The University, now located northeast of the district, houses the collections of the Vincennes Library Company established in 1806.
3. Old French Town, bounded on the north by the Wabash, on the east by Broadway, on the south by Eighth Street, and on the west by Willow: The area contains the heart of the early French settlement, St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church (recommended for nomination to the National Register) constructed from 1826 to 1840 in the Greek Revival style. The typical French style house, the verandah running the length of the house on both sides, can still be found in this area, although many have been torn down or altered beyond recognition. As the French influence declined after 1800, the area was claimed by Americans who

- then built homes in the period style. The French influence can be seen in a number of houses constructed well into the 19th century.
- The Court House area bounded on the north by Sixth Street, on the east by Hart Street, on the west by Main Street and on the south by Tenth Street: The construction of the present Knox County Court House in 1873 prompted the building of a number of fine homes, mostly done with Italianate influence, near the new seat of local government.
 - The downtown commercial area, bounded on the north by Second Street, on the east by Busseron, on the south by Eleventh Street, and on the west by Vigo Street: Main Street and Sixth Street are the central avenues of the downtown area. Some shops on Main Street between First Street and Second Street have had their fronts renovated to give the appearance of Colonial America, but many features of the buildings still exhibit the styles of the late 1800's. Classic Revival Architecture influenced the construction of several structures on Second Street. The Old State Bank (c. 1835) (a State Memorial on the National Register) and the Abner T. Ellis Mansion both reveal this style. Very little new construction has taken place on Main Street since the latter part of the 19th century and it clearly retains its architectural unity.
 - The residential area, bounded on the north by First Street, on the east by College, on the south by Eleventh, and the west by Broadway: This area exhibits no especially prominent feature or structure, but is composed of a number of structures that illustrate an architectural and cultural unity. Sixth Street west of Broadway has a number of fine residential homes of the Anglo-Italian mode mixed here and there with composite style houses.

The following key structures illustrate the character of the district:

- The Brouillet House, 509 N. First Street, (c. 1790): A French Canadian Colonial House with vertical hewn logs with bousillage between "poteaux sur sol", approximately 35' x 25'. Original four room house has had a lean-to added to rear. The exterior has been covered with clapboard and it was remodeled before the turn of the century.
- The Indiana Territorial Capital State Memorial (c. 1800) (on the National Register): This two story, Federal folk construction, wood building with a gallery, was originally located closer to the center of town but has been relocated near the University. Although it has been moved at least three times, the Territorial Capital has been restored and carefully placed to retain much of its significance.
- The Ellis Mansion, 111 North Second Street: (C. 1830) Classic Revival Architecture. Roman Doric stone columns support the entablature of stone with a semicircular window in the Roman tradition. This building is maintained in excellent condition and is the present home of the Harmony Society.
- Lacy House (present owner) - 314 South Third (c. 1840): French Colonial influence. One story wood frame with gallery across front. Original shutters and siding. Later wing at rear.
- Dunn House - 815 & 817 Busseron Street (1847): Federal Style one

- story brick duplex. Wood addition not part of original building but blends well with brick. Restored in the late sixties to its present condition which is certainly close to the original. It is currently being used as a duplex residence.
6. Summers House (present owner) 827 North Eighth Street (c. 1859-1866): Classic Revival. One story brick with hip roof. Exterior restored. Wood rear addition enhances the structure. Excellent example of classic facade with massive recessed entrance. The dormer is a later addition.
 7. Fyfield House, 416 South Fifth Street (1860): Classic Revival. Brick one story with later rear additions. Front door opening is a fine example of Classic Revival with semicircle window above and slender columns at side of opening. Windows and doors were changed during an extensive remodeling around the turn of the century.
 8. Grannan House (present owner), 825 Busseron Street (c. 1870): Italinete two story brick. Excellent example of this style. As originally built. The original iron fence and stone retaining wall are extant.
 9. Knox County Court H0use, 7th and Busseron Streets (1873): "Norman Style". Newly restored. Exterior of stone with four impressive towers, each different in detail. A masterpiece of stone masonry work and roof details.
 10. Cauthorn House, 506 N. Third Street (c. 1874): Two story brick Italinete on original lot with original fence. Rear is an addition to original square plan. Front porch remodeled. Interior is as originally built except for removal of rear stairway.
 11. Gimble-Bond Store, 200 N. Main Street (1879): Two story brick example of extreme ornate Italinete as used for commercial store facades. Windows have been closed. This is on the site of the first Gimble's store (c. 1842).
 12. Rabb House, 524 Broadway (c. 1880-1890): Massive Italinete two story brick. A new porch enhances the beauty of lovely example of this period. Interior plaster, molding and details preserved as originally built.
 13. East side of Main Street between First and Second Streets: storefronts have been renovated to give the appearance of a Colonial Style structure, but exterior features of the building above street level are good examples of Renaissance architecture.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Vincennes had one of the oldest and largest of the French Forts in Indiana and as such is perhaps one of the oldest continuously inhabited areas in the state. An early Piankeshaw Indian Village spread out along the edges of the Wabash was there to greet the early French trappers and hunters who explored the area at the beginning of the 1700's. The French settled the area, married with the Indians, and brought protection in the form of a military fort by 1733.

Thirty years later, in 1763, England gained control of the settlement for a period of some sixteen years. However, British influence on the town has been slight.

In 1779, George Rogers Clark captured Vincennes for the American cause which in turn contributed to the addition of much of the area which became the Old Northwest Territory to the United States. By this time, Americans had begun to cross over the Alleghenies and into the Wabash Valley. By 1800, they had taken over much of Vincennes and French influence slowly blended with American traditions.

From 1800 to 1813, Vincennes was the capital of the Indiana Territory, and William Henry Harrison, Governor of the Territory from 1800 to 1812, built his house "Grouseland" in 1804 and lived in it until he resigned as governor in 1812. Following the removal of the capital to Corydon in 1813, Vincennes lost some of its importance to the State and National Political scene, but continued to grow as a commercial town serving as a steamboat port and center for the farming community. It also housed Vincennes University, the first institution of higher learning west of the Alleghenies and north of the Ohio River. When the Wabash and Erie Canal bypassed the town several miles to the east, Vincennes lost some of its commercial importance and it was not until the coming of the railroad that Vincennes again became an agricultural trading center.

Vincennes was also a center of culture and learning in Indiana for many years. The institutions associated with the Catholic Church provided education to both the settlers and the Indians for years. Vincennes University operated at several locations in Vincennes and continues in the town. The Vincennes Library Company (1806) was an important effort to provide a resource for the frontier community. In 1838, Father Simon Brute brought his large library from Europe and the East to Vincennes to further expand the cultural resources of the town and the state.

Vincennes is exemplary of many things in Indiana. Associations with the French are still visible in several structures but are most apparent in the streets laid out in the French survey system. There are archeological sites that have yet to be fully explored that certainly contain evidence of Native American, French, English and American occupation. Fort Sackville, Fort Knox I and III, a historic Indian settlement are all within this district. It also contains architectural evidence of development as a 19th century commercial center for western Indiana. The Vincennes Historic District has ties with all phases of the development of Indiana and has visible physical evidence of most of them.

Vincennes Historic District - Resource Count, Additional Documentation

The official documentation for the Vincennes Historic District on file at the NPS states that the district encompasses 1,087 resources. It is unknown how that figure was determined, since the documentation did not include a comprehensive list of resources. Based on the attached inventory, the district includes the following resources:

1,161 Contributing buildings	405 Non-contributing buildings
5 Contributing sites	6 Non-contributing sites
9 Contributing structures	5 Non-Contributing structures
37 Contributing objects	3 Non-contributing objects

1,212 Contributing 419 Non-contributing

205 vacant and parking lots are included in the attached inventory, for locational purposes, but are not included in the resource count. Only primary buildings are included in the count (no garages or temporary buildings such as yard sheds). Buildings that have been demolished since the inventory was first completed in 1997 have been included and noted in the attached inventory for locational purposes, but they were not counted in the above tally.

The non-contributing buildings are either too recent (post-1955 - see significance section), or have been too altered to contribute. Non-contributing buildings have lost historical feeling through application of siding that obscures detail, re-sizing of window openings, additions that compromise the historic form, removal of historic elements, or, a combination of the above. The net result is that these buildings are unable to convey their time and place in the development of Vincennes.

Vincennes Historic District - Statement of Significance, Additional Documentation (based on March 1997, Knox County Interim Report, by Indiana Division of Historic Preservation / Historic Landmarks Foundation of Indiana)

The purpose of this document is to expand the period of significance of the Vincennes Historic District. Additionally, this submittal includes a comprehensive inventory of every resource within the boundaries of the district as-listed. Listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1974, the district encompasses much of the town's area. The district includes the oldest, continuously inhabited land in Indiana beginning with the Piankeshaw Indian Village. Locally the district can be divided into five different areas: the Riverfront area; Old French Town; the Courthouse area; the Downtown Commercial area; and a residential area.

The period of significance indicated in the original nomination includes check boxes for 18th Century, 19th Century, and 20th Century. Based on more current policies and approaches to the period of significance concept, this document establishes the period of significance as c.1787 (date of Fort Knox, deposits of which are known to exist in the district) - 1955. It should be noted that although the date c.1787 is cited here, Vincennes undoubtedly could yield data as far back as c.1732 (construction of a French fort and subsequent French settlement). For the end of the period of significance, the year 1955 was chosen since it appears to coincide with both architectural and historical trends in Vincennes. As an industrial center, Vincennes was beginning a long descent by 1955. Additionally, after 1955, the number of buildings that contribute to the district falls off sharply.

The district's collection of early architecture is significant. Within the Riverfront area lies the site of the 1787 Fort Knox (26305), which was America's westernmost outpost at that time, and Grouseland (26069), the home of William Henry Harrison, Indiana's first Territorial Governor and the 9th President of the United States. Also included in this area are the 1806 Michel Brouillet House (26948). Reflecting the town's French heritage, and the Indiana Territory Capitol (26048) which was moved to its current location in 1949.

Old French Town includes the 1826 St. Francis Xavier Cathedral (26668), the oldest cathedral building in the state, St. Gabriel's College and the St. Francis Xavier Rectory (26671, 26670). The earliest known records of this parish date to 1749.

The early 1800's ushered in a period of growth for the village, whose northern boundary at that time was Busseron Street with the eastern boundary stretching no further than 6th Street. In 1806, Vincennes University was founded as the College of Vincennes making it the oldest college in Indiana (26018).

The town's commercial activity included the organization of the Bank of Vincennes in 1814. Andrew Gardner opened a cabinet shop in 1816, later shifting from making caskets to conducting funerals. This business continues to this day as the Gardner Funeral Home (26566). Two of the town's business ventures, the Vincennes Bank and the Vincennes Steam Mill failed in 1821, although four years later, the town's first cotton mill opened for business. For the next three decades, Vincennes remained primarily an agricultural community.

It was the coming of the railroad during the 1850s that ushered Vincennes into a period of prosperity. Following the Civil War, the town's economic base expanded to include manufacturing. A number of factories were built along the river in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, including the Vincennes Foundry and Machine Company (26920). Shotgun houses such as the Leeds House (26942) and the Butler-Clark House (26943) provided housing for the factories' workers.

It was during the late nineteenth century and early twentieth century that Vincennes reached its zenith. Nowhere is this more evident than in the town's downtown business district. Main Street is lined with a number of outstanding commercial blocks, many incorporating locally-made cast iron and pressed metal architectural details. Among the most notable of these buildings are the Adam Gimbel Block (26480,26482), the Moore and Harris Drug Store (26542), the Frank Fay Building (26471) and the Moses Wile Store (26491). The downtown business district retained its singular role as the most important commercial center in Knox County well into the mid-twentieth century. The taverns, restaurants, and theaters of Vincennes were popular spots for servicemen during World War II.

This period also saw a residential boom. A number of the city's prominent families had their houses built in the area surrounding the downtown area, often employing some of Vincennes most prominent architects. This significant collection of architect-designed homes provides examples of the most popular architectural styles of the era. The 1889 Hiram Foulkes House (26325), and the William P. Ritterskamp House (27388) both designed by Thomas Campbell are two outstanding examples of the Queen Anne style. Louis Osterhage designed the Ray E. Fortune house (26284) in the Craftsman style. Osterhage and Campbell collaborated on the Romanesque Revival style Andrew Bruner House (26327) and the Colonial Revival style Marlin Mail House (26366).

Local architects were also responsible for a number of prominent public buildings in Vincennes. Foremost of these architects were John W. Gaddis and John Bayard. Gaddis' designs for a number of public and religious buildings are noteworthy. The Vincennes Presbyterian Church (27350) and St. John Evangelical United Brethren Church (27318), built two years apart are outstanding examples of the Gothic Revival style. Gaddis was also responsible for the 1903 Knox County Sheriff's Residence and Jail (27619) and the Clark Jr. High School (27439). Vincennes had a long tradition of interest in education. One of the first "libraries" in the Old Northwest Territory was the collection of Rev. Benedict Flaget, who organized a library, housed within the Vincennes Cathedral complex in 1794. Vincennes was also the site of Indiana's first college, as mentioned earlier. Two of John Bayard's most prominent educational buildings of the twentieth century are the Collegiate Gothic Revival style Vincennes Public Library (1919) and the LaSalle School (1927) (27493, 27510). Additionally, the Adams Coliseum (1926) is an example of a Collegiate Gothic gym that served the educational needs of the community.

Although the Great Depression of the 1930s hit Vincennes particularly hard, the formation of the George Rogers Clark Memorial Commission sparked renewed interest in the area's history. The construction in 1932 of the George Rogers Clark Memorial (26965), designed by Frank C. Hiron, commemorated the contributions of this Revolutionary War figure. On June 14, 1936, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt dedicated the memorial and 30 years later, the site was designated as a National Park. Another important Depression-era structure, the Lincoln Memorial Bridge (26617) was dedicated in 1933.

During World War II, industries in Vincennes contributed to the war effort. Undoubtedly, the town's links to the coal industry and its rail connections were useful as well. The U.S. Army Air Corps established George Field, just across the Wabash River in Lawrenceville, Illinois in 1942. By 1944, George Field was used for glider tow training, home to both C-47 crews and glider pilots. Vincennes established a USO club to entertain airmen and crew stationed at George Field. Many servicemen from George Field found housing or enjoyed the commercial and public attractions of Vincennes during the war. New businesses, such as the Art Moderne Fort Sackville Theater (1940, 711 Church St.) undoubtedly saw increases in patronage.

As manufacturing declined as an economic force in Vincennes and commercial activity shifted east and north of town with construction of a bypass, the community has concentrated more on the promotion of its rich past. The National Park site, the Territory site and several restored buildings reflecting the city's settlement period, provide the visitor a glimpse of Vincennes rich heritage.

Dear Father Conti:

Thank you for your recent letter concerning the Old Cathedral and Library at Vincennes, Indiana.

P.L. 89-517, authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to accept a donation by the State of Indiana of the George Rogers Clark Memorial for establishment as the George Rogers Clark National Historical Park, provided also for cooperative agreements with owners of other properties in Vincennes historically associated with Clark and the Northwest Territory. The act did not specify these other properties, but the National Park Service will undertake a study to determine which properties should be included in the park. When the study is concluded, the owners will be notified and negotiations will be undertaken to conclude cooperative agreements with them.

We appreciate the interest which prompted your letter, and we will be happy to notify you when the contemplated study is completed.

Sincerely yours,

A. CLARK STRATTON
Acting Director
