DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Tompkins Inn is a 1 1/2 story frame structure with a modified pitched roof and a shed porch partially surrounding two sides of the house. The building is located in a rural setting several hundred feet from U. S. Highway 441 and on ground gently rising above the highway. An outbuilding which served as a quarters for servants and stagecoach drivers is located behind the Inn and a cemetery containing the graves of members of the Tompkins family is across the highway on property not included in this nomination.

The oldest portion of Tompkins Inn, dating from about 1812, is the 1 1/2 story section of the building which contains two rooms on the first floor and two rooms on the second floor. Each of the first floor rooms has a large brick fireplace; and these fireplaces are located on axis with each other, but off center of the exterior walls of the two rooms. The two first floor rooms are built with heavy timbers and are fine examples of handhewn construction of the braced frame type. The corner posts are L-shaped with equal 12" legs and have a width of 4". These corner posts are of particular interest since they are shaped from a single section of wood. The stude generally measure 4" x 3 1/2". All of the wood members including studs, corner posts and bracing are joined by mortise and tenon. The two first floor rooms are separated by a wall constructed of vertical boards measuring from 9" to 13" in width. The exterior door of Room A (see plan A) has wide and low proportions and measures 3'7" x 6'7". The window glazing in the house is not original and the windows exhibit a variety of mullion treatments. The two brick fireplaces measure approximately 3'4" x 5' and have simple wood surrounds with a slightly projecting mantel.

A very steep enclosed stair leads to the second floor. The two rooms on the second floor are contained within the attic space and each contains a window. In the recollections of a resident of Tompkins Inn in the 1930's it was mentioned that the second floor was one large room and did not contain the partition which now exists between the two rooms.

The remaining rooms on the first floor include a small room on the porch and two rooms on the southeast side of the house. All of these rooms were added in the early twentieth century, probably around 1920.

Observation of the floor joists indicates that the porch is of more recent construction than the central body of the house. In all probability, the present porch basically reflects the appearance of the original porch.

The building originally had a detached or semi-detached kitchen. This element of the design has been entirely lost. Another early outbuilding does exist and is located about 75' to the rear of the Inn. This building is a simple rectangle consisting of two rooms divided by a wall made of wide vertical boards. The rooms are floored and are raised about 1 1/2" above ground. The left room of this building contains a small brick fireplace; a small stair in the right room leads to a loft which exists above both rooms. A lean-to shed has been built against the end wall of the right room. The construction of this building is identical in sizes of timbers and craftsmanship to that used in the older portion of the Inn. The use of L-shaped corner posts hewn from a single log and jointing with mortise and tenon are also identical in appearance to that used in the Inn.

Six large and very old cedar trees are located in the front yard of the Inn. These cedar trees, with diameters of 28"+, are clustered to the south of the Inn. Evidence of the location of the old post road is found near these trees and is indicated by the abrupt sloping contours of the land immediately in front of the Inn and the cedar trees.

Since 1970, the house has been restored to good physical condition through the efforts of Mrs. T. H. Resseau, Sr., and the Town and Country Garden Club.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Tompkins Inn is important to the early history of Putnam County as an example of the early architectural style of the county and as a building constructed and operated by early settlers of the county. The building is located on the old post road between Milledgeville, capital of Georgia at the time of its construction, and Athens and was operated for many years as a stagecoach inn for this important route. During this period, the Tompkins Inn housed many state legislators who were en route to the state capital.

The origins of Tompkins Inn begin in the decade of 1810. A parcel of land including the land upon which the Inn is located was bought by George C. Bird in 1810 for $300. In 1812 this land was purchased by Giles Tompkins for $2,000, and certain improvements on the 1810 property are evident in the price of the land. Whether the Inn was constructed by Bird or Tompkins has not been determined, but the history of the Inn grows under the ownership of Tompkins.

Giles Tompkins (1766-1841) was an original settler of Putnam County, which was established in December 1807, and is listed as a member of the first Grand Jury of Putnam County in 1808. Giles Tompkins left few historical records, but it is known that he did own sizeable land holdings in and around Putnam County.

Giles' son Nicholas Tompkins is often mentioned in relationship to Tompkins Inn; and, although he never owned the Inn, he was an important businessman in his own right. Nicholas probably moved to Heard County between 1830 and 1835. There, in 1860, he was the second largest slave holder with 62 slaves and 8,000 acres of land, valued at $50,000.

Giles Tompkins and, afterwards, his widow Sarah Tompkins operated the Inn until the 1850's when it was given to a granddaughter, Sarah Tompkins. Mention of the Inn was found in a report to the Georgia Railroad Company in 1834 which was considering the construction of the railroad to Eatonton. It was mentioned in this report that passengers might get out for breakfast at Tompkins. This railroad line, however, was never constructed.

The ownership of the Inn passed from Sarah Tompkins, daughter of Nicholas Tompkins and granddaughter of Giles and Sarah Tompkins, to her husband Josias Boswell in 1856. Due to the apparent accumulation of debts, the Inn was sold to A. R. Zachary in 1862; but, in 1874, the Inn was purchased again by Boswell's second wife Emiline. Emiline Boswell owned the Inn until she died in 1910 and it was willed to Mary Anderson. The ownership of the land next passed to the Federal Land Bank of Columbia, South Carolina in 1927. In 1936 the United States Government purchased many tracts of land including Tompkins Inn; and, until 1970, the Inn was rented from the government as a private residence.

In 1970 Mrs. T. H. Resseau traded a parcel of land to the United States Government for the Tompkins Inn and 3.03 acres of land. The Inn and land were then deeded (in 1972) to the Town and Country Garden Club, and it is presently being restored and used by the club.

The Tompkins Inn and the one surviving outbuilding, which reportedly served as the quarters for servants and stagecoach drivers, are fine examples of the techniques of handhewn construction employed by builders in the early 1800's. Each building incorporates the same methods of construction with mortise and tenon joints and braced corner posts. Of particular interest is the use of single logs hewn to an L-shape and used as corner posts in each of the two buildings.

The family cemetery has also survived intact from the early 1800's. The cemetery is located across the highway (formally the old post road) and down the hill approximately 175 yards from the Inn and is not on the nominated property. This somewhat remote location may have been selected as a private place away from the activity and commercial character of the Inn. The graves of Tompkins' family members including Giles Tompkins and his daughter Mary Morrow are located within a 2'8" wide by 3' high rock wall. Adjacent to the rock wall enclosure is a Victorian iron fence which encloses the grave of Josias Boswell (1811-1882), an owner of the Inn in the late 1800's. Located to the east of the rock wall enclosure is the confederate marker of Irby Hudson Scott, a relative to the Tompkins family by marriage. On the north side of the rock wall enclosure are several rough granite headstones believed to be markers of slaves' graves.

The Tompkins Inn, its one outbuilding and its nineteenth century graveyard are some of the only surviving remnants of the earliest architecture of Putnam County. The building, the history associated with the owners and the use of the building are important elements in the early history of Putnam County.
