Narrative Description (Describe the historic and current condition of the property on one or more continuation sheets.)

Built in the Adirondack style, the three-sided Hasselborg Lake East Shelter Cabin had a peeled log superstructure and shake walls and roof. The cabin is now in ruins. The sill logs are in their original orientation and have dimensions similar to the standing cabins. The notches for attachment of the vertical posts are evident, as are the galvanized nails. A few bleached logs of purlin size, now burned, are scattered about. A photograph at the Admiralty Island National Monument shows the site a decade or so ago, when the structure had already collapsed but more of the structural elements were visible. The current canoe route map marks the spot as a "primitive campsite."

The site is located where the outlet stream of Beaver Lake enters Hasselborg Lake. The natural environment is similar to its appearance in the 1930s.

8. Statement of Significance

Applicable National Register Criteria (Mark "x" in one or more boxes for the criteria qualifying the property for National Register listing)

- A Property is associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Explain the significance of the property on one or more continuation sheets.)

The Hasselborg Lake East Shelter Cabin, now in ruins, was a three-sided shelter built by the Civilian Conservation Corps as part of the Admiralty Island Canoe Route. At one time it was an example of the three-sided Adirondack style shelter cabin built for public recreation in the 1930s, but now it has collapsed and been cannibalized for firewood. The site continues to be used as a recreational camp site.
