The Grain Exchange Building, located on the corner of Fourth Avenue and Fourth Street, was designed by Long and Kees--the same architect duo that designed the Lumber Exchange Building--and was completed in 1902. This 10-story building flaunted a very elaborate exterior with stone carving between windows and at top and bottom corners. Grain, seed, elevator, and stock brokerage companies affixed their names to their office windows for passersby to see. This photo, courtesy of The Minneapolis Public Library.
