DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Old Monterey Historic District must be admitted to be a patchy visual experience, but one (in two areas) which nevertheless contains a very noteworthy collection of mid-nineteenth century California adobes. The area has, of course, been built around by various styles, and has been developed with later styles within the district too.

The northern section of the district, the one which skirts the Southwestern-most section of Monterey Bay, includes such noteworthy structures as the Customs House Plaza (adobe), the first brick building in California, the first theatre in California (adobe), the Casa Pacifica, the Casa del Oro (adobe), and the Doud House. The northern area is probably the more visited of the two, with a greater tourist appeal, engendered by the open State Monuments and the carinal arcade atmosphere of the nearby wharf, with its shops and glitter.

The southern area of the district is largely residential, with a significant portion of the central business district. It includes such notable buildings as the Larkin House, prototype for the Monterey style, the Sherman Head-quarters, a tiny adobe in which the young junior officer was once quartered adjacent to the Larkin House, the Casa Amesti (adobe), owned by the National Trust, the Stokes Adobe, Colton Hall, the first Greek-revival structure built on the Pacific Coast in 1847-49, the Casa Guttierez (adobe), the so-called House of the Four Winds, another two-story adobe built by Thomas Larkin, and the First Federal Courthouse, a typical Spanish-colonial townhouse built in 1836-39, and later used by the first U.S. Federal court.

Southern Historic District Buildings:

- 1. Casa Alvarado, located at 510 Dutra Street and privately owned. Erected in 1836, the walls of this traditional one-story adobe are sheathed witl clapboard. The house was the residence of Don Juan Bautista Alvarado during his term as Governor of California from 1836 to 1842. The house is now used as a private residence.
- 2. Vasquez Adobe, located on Dutra Street between Jefferson and Madison Streets and owned by the city of Monterey. Originally a typical one-story adobe house, the second story and the two-story porches are of wood and were added late in the 19th century. The structure is now used for municipal offices.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Two sections of Monterey, California, enjoy more significant collections of early adobe bui dings, illustrating the Mexican-colonial, Spanish-colonial, and early-American periods of architecture, than anywhere else in the U.S.A. The mixture of earlier one-story adobes, and the subsequent two-story adobes of the "Monterey-colonial" style, is cohesive enough to convey a strong feeling for the mid-19th century streetscapes of the colonial capital, in these two designated areas.

History

Monterey, California, was not only the Spanish and Mexican capital of California for most of the period between 1776 and 1849, but also the stronghold of European civilization on the American Pacific Coast, and the hub of social, economic, and political activities in California. Monterey was founded as a presidio on June 3, 1770, as the second of the four presidios established by the Spanish in California.

Early in the 1820's, the inhabitants began to construct their houses outside the adobe walls of the fort and Monterey was formally authorized as a town or pueblo by the Mexican government in 1827. By 1830, the population was about 500, and in 1845, it numbered approximately 750. Old Monterey was then a tangle of narrow streets irregularly laid out, and its some 200 buildings were widely scattered.

In the 20th century, Monterey expanded, demolished, and rebuilt, until only a few dozen of the 19th century historic structures still stand. Many are widely scattered with the former open areas between them now occupied by modern structures that impair the historic scene. Two pockets of historic structures, however, have survived. They contain good examples of Spanish and Mexican colonial period buildings in such numbers and without serious intrusions so as to preserve and convey an accurate impression of mid-19th century Monterey. 1

- 3. Casa de la Totre, located at 502 Pierce Street and privately owned. A stypical one-story adobe house of three rooms and an entrance hall, the residence was erected in 1852 and subsequently enlarged by several 9th century frame lean-to additions. The little altered house is now a private residence.
- 4. Gordon House, located at 527 Pierce Street and privately owned. Built in 1849-1850 by Philip Roach, this simple one-story house was one of the first prefabricated frame house to be constructed in Monterey. It is now used as a private residence.
- 5. Colton Hall, located on Friendly Plaza facing Pacific Street, between Jefferson and Madison Streets, and owned by the City of Monterey. Built in 1847-49 by the Reverend Colton, mayor and dictator of American-occupied Monterey, this building was the first Greek Revival structure to be erected on the Pacific Coast. The large, two-story stone building measures 70 x 30 feet and has a central two-story pedimented portico that is supported by two fluted columns of the Ionic order. Of considerable architectural interest, it is used as a museum and is open to visitors. The stone one-story, former town jail, erected in 1854, and located just south and to the rear of Colton Hall, is also open to visitors as a museum.
- 6. Underwood-Brown Adobe, located at the south end of Friendly Plaza, facing Pacific Street and near Madison Street, and owned by the City of Monterey. The older portion of this one-story adobe was constructed in 1845 by Santiago (James) Stokes.
- 7. Casa Guttierez, located at 590 Calle Principal and owned by the State of California. Built in 1841-42, this two-story adobe was erected by Joaquin Guttierez. Typical of the period, the restored house is administered by the State Department of Parks and Recreation and is open to visitors.
- 8. House of the Four Winds, located at 540 Calle Principal and owned by the Monterey Women's Club. This two-story adobe was built by Thomas O. Larking, American merchant and master builder, in 1835 and used by him as a store. The restored house is now the headquarters of the Monterey Women's Club.

- 9. Sherman's Headquarters, located at 464 Calle Principal and owned by the State of California. The small one-story adobe was built by Thomas O. Larkin in 1834 and was used as quarters by Lieutenant William Tecumseh Sherman from 1847 to 1849, and General Henry W. Halleck, Secretary of State after the American occupation of California. Administered by the State Department of Parks and Recreation, the restored house is open to visitors.
- 10. Larkin House, located at 510 Calle Principal and owned by the State of California. Already a Registered National Historic Landmark, this structure was erected by Thomas O. Larkin in 1835-37 and is architecturally significant as the original prototype of the Monterey Colonial house. The two-story adobe house with broad two-story veranda around three sides is 46 feet wide and 52 feet long. The house is administered by the State Department of Parks and Recreation and is open to visitors.
- 11. Casa Alvarado, located at 490-98 Alvarado Street at its junction with Jefferson Street and privately owned. Originally a one-story adobe, this structure served as the office of Juan Bautista Alvarado, Governor of California from 1836 to 1842. A frame upper-story was added in 1874 and this was completely rebuilt in 1936. The altered building contains shops.
- 12. Cooper-Molera Adobe, located at the intersection of Alvarado, Munras, and Polk Streets (at 508 Munras Street) and privately owned. This long, two-story, adobe with a wooden balcony was erected by Captain John Roger Cooper, half-brother of Thomas O. Larkin, in 1829. In addition to the main house, there is a large reinforced barn and an adobe-walled enclosed garden.
- 13. Casa Amesti, located at 516 Polk Street and owned by the National Trust for Historic Preservation. A two-storied, balconied adobe, erected in stages between 1834 and 1855 by Don Jose Amesti, is a handsome example of a typical Monterey Colonial townhouse. The building, measuring 41-1/2 feet by 84 feet, has been restored and is open to visitors.
- 14. First Federal Courthouse, located at 599 Polk Street and privately owned. A good example of a typical one-story Spanish Colonial townhouse, this building was erected bu Don Jose Joaquin de la Torre in 1836-39. In 1851-52, the house was used as a courthouse by the first U.S. Federal court held in Monterey.

Northern Historic District Buildings:

- 1. Old Custom House, located at 115 Alvarado Street, owned by the State of California, and administered by the Department of Parks and Recreation. Already a Registered National Historic Landmark, the Old Custom House, erected in 1827-1846, is an excellent example of Monterey Colonial public building architecture and also the oldest extant public building on the Pacific Coast. The Custom House, which is 135 feet long and 34 feet wide, is a long, low, one-story, tile-roofed adobe building with two-story wings located at the north and south ends. The structure is open to visitors.
- 2. Pacific House, located at 200-222 Calle Principal at Scott Street, owned by the State of California and administered by the Department of Parks and Recreation. Constructed in 1847, the Pacific House is an excellent example of the application of the Monterey Colonial style to commercial buildings. Constructed by David Wright for Thomas O. Larkin, the rectangular-shaped, two-story adobe measured 72 by 42 feet. The building has a centilever, covered wooden balcony around all four sides and a hipped roof. The building was first rented to the United States Quartermaster for use as offices and the storage of military supplies during the Mexican War. In 1849, it became a boarding house and salon known as the Pacific House. Restored in 1925, the adobe was donated to the State in 1954 and is now open to visitors as a museum.
- 3. Casa del Oro, located at 200 Oliver Street at its junction with Scott Street, owned by the State of California, and administered by the Department of Parks and Recreation. A two-story adobe built by Thomas O. Larkin in 1844, Casa de Oro was first used as a hospital for American sailors, and then, during the Mexican War, as quarters for American troops. After 1848, it was utilized as a general store. The house, donated to the State in 1939 and restored in 1959, is open to visitors.
- 4. First Theater, located at the southwest corner of Pacific and Scott Streets, owned by the State of California, and administered by the Department of Parks and Recreation. A typical one-story adobe built by Jack Swan in 1846-47 as boardinghouse and barroom. In 1848, it was occupied by American troops who utilized it as the first theater in California. The building was donated to the State in 1906 and restored as a theater in 1937. The structure is open to visitors as a museum.

- 5. Old Whaling Station, locsted at 391 Decatur Street and privately owned. This two-story adobe was erected in 1855 by Captain J. P. Davenport as a boardinghouse for a company of 17 Portuguese whallers known as the Gold Company. Using two small craft, they engaged in coastal whaling, hunting the humpback and California grey whale in Monterey Bay. The covered balcony on the second story was added in 1903 when the adobe was restored. The house is now a private residence.
- 6. First Brick House, located at 351 Decatur Street and privately owned. Built in 1847-48 by A. G. Lawrie for Duncan Dickinson, a member of the 1846 Donner Party of overland emigrants, this was the first firedbrick domestic structure to be erected on the Pacific Coast. The two-story house is built on a simple rectangular box plan. Originally the house had six rooms, three on each floor and those on the first floor had dirt-packed floors. There is a small balcony over the front entrance. The structure is now used as a private residence.

Monterey Old Town District CONTINUATION SHEET

ITEM NUMBER 10 PAGE 1

The Old Monterey National Historic Landmark District is a non-contiguous two-part area in the heart of Monterey which, through its collection of early buildings of the colonial and early-American periods, conveys an atmosphere of the pioneer days of this California town.

The two areas may be referred to as the northern and southern districts. northern area is bounded in the following way: beginning at the northeast corner of Scott and Van Buren Streets, the boundary line runs north along the east side of Van Buren to the first lot line on the east side of Van Buren north of Seeno Street. The line then runs east along that lot line to Pacific Street, and crosses Pacific Street in the shortest possible line to the northwesternmost point of an unnamed street east of Pacific Street running perpendicular to Olivier Street from Pacific Street, to Monterey Bay. The boundary follows the north side of that street extended to the Bay. The wharf at the eastern end of this unnamed street is not part of the district, being simply an attachment, used to shelter junk shops, tourist traps, and the like. The boundary line follows south and east along the shore line, to a point east of the Custom House, where the boundary of the Custom House meets the shore line. The boundary follows the perimeter of the Custom House Plaza to the point where the Plaza meets Olivier Street. The boundary then crosses west over Olivier Street to the most extreme southeast point of the property lot of the Casa De Oro, at the Southwest corner of Scott and Olivier Streets. The boundary follows that lot line generally west and hearth, to Pacific Street, and then crosses Pacific Street to the most extreme southeastern point of the property lot of the so-called "First-Theatre" at the Southwest corner of Pacific and Scott Streets. The boundary follows that lot line west and then north, to the point where it runs into Scott Street. The line then crosses from that point northwest to the northeast corner of Scott and Van Buren Streets, which is the starting point.

The southern area is bounded in the following way: beginning at the southeast corner of Jefferson and Van Buren Streets, the line runs east along the south curb of Jefferson Street, to the southwestern corner of Jefferson Street, and Calle Principale. From there it crosses Calle Principale, diagonally northeast to the western extremity of the southernmost lot on the east side of Calle Principale, between Jefferson and Franklin Streets. The boundary follows easterly, the northern side of that lot and the one adjacent to the east, until it reaches Alvarado Street. It then follows the property line south along the west curb of Alvarado, to the junction with Pearl and Polk Streets. From the corner, the line then continues diagonally southeast, across Polk Street, and then along the northern side of The Cooper-Molera adobe property (the south curb of Munras Street), to its easternmost point, then turning south and following the rear property lines of that property, the next lot south on Polk Street, and thirdly, that of the First Federal Court property, which occupies the southeast corner of Hartnell and Polk Streets. The boundary then continues directly across Hartnell Street to the southeastern boundary of the Stokes Adobe, and follows that property line, first southwest, and then northwest, to its junction with a short piece of the very bottom of Calle Principale. The boundary then proceeds directly across the street to the northeast corner of Madison and Pacific Streets, following the north curbline of Madison Street, west, across Dutra Street to the northeast corner of Madison and Van Buren Streets. The line then turns north, following the east curbline of Van Buren Street to the southeast corner of Jefferson and Van Buren Streets, which was the starting point.

The red lines on the attached photocopy map, entitled "H" Historical Modifying Zone Map, Planning Commission, City of Monterey dated March, 1963, show the above described boundaries. The boundary has not been inserted on the USGS Quadrangle since that map does not contain features necessary to show the boundaries adequately.

Memorandum

To:

Secretary of the Interior

Through: Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife,

Parks, and Marine Resources

Acting

From:

Director, National Park Service

Subject:

National Historic Landmark recommendations, 61st meeting of the Advisory Board on National Parks, Historic Sites,

Buildings and Monuments

Enclosed herewith is the memorandum of the Advisory Board on National Parks, Historic Sites, Buildings and Monuments summarizing its findings and recommendations on the National Survey of Historic Sites and Buildings partial theme study of "Colonial Architecture." This memorandum makes two principal recommendations: (1) That 77 sites encompassed by this study be declared eligible for National Historic Landmark status. These are listed under Sections A, B, C, and D of the memorandum; (2) That 41 of these sites be given further consideration in long range plans for addition to the National Park System.

We recommend that you approve the Advisory Board's memorandum, and that it be returned to this office to become a part of the permanent record of actions recommended by the Board and approved by you.
