Narrative Description
(Describe the historic and current physical appearance and condition of the property. Describe contributing and noncontributing resources if applicable. Begin with a summary paragraph that briefly describes the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, type, style, method of construction, setting, size, and significant features. Indicate whether the property has historic integrity.)

Summary Paragraph

The Irene Burns House is a two-story Stick-Eastlake residence located on the northeast corner of Linden Avenue and Boardman Street in Auburn, California, Lot 2 of the Tibbs Addition, aka Linden Heights of East Auburn. Built in 1895 by Roy and Sarah Brown as their residence, the home was sold to Miss Irene Burns and her brother Robert in 1900. The building has an L-shaped plan, with a hip-on-gable main roof and a side-gabled wing on the northern wall. Siding was originally constructed with wooden shiplap, currently covered with asbestos siding. The foundation is brick except for a concrete foundation on a screened back porch constructed in 1936. Windows are double-hung with wooden sash.

Narrative Description

The building’s plan is L-shaped, with a hip-on-gable main roof of moderate pitch and a front-facing side-gabled wing, with composition shingles. Two tall brick chimneys are located on the roof ridge, slightly set back from each gable end. A rectangular bay projects diagonally from the wing. The wing’s gable features a pediment with decorated verge boards, fish-scale shingles, and a semicircular louvered vent. The cornice line is supported by decorative brackets around the roof’s perimeter. An asymmetrical front porch with hipped roof is supported by four turned porch posts with a spindlework frieze and brackets. Between the porch supports is a wooden balustrade of turned posts. Stairs to the front porch are brick. Foundation is brick with a concrete planter box. The main entrance is a wooden two-panel door with transom window. Windows are all single-light double-hung wooden sash except for metal slider windows on the building rear, in utility room and second-story enclosed porch. The bay window has stained glass squares bordering the upper center light. Most of the windows have green canvas awnings. Front and rear doors have Stick-Eastlake style screen doors with spindlework details.
The building rear features enclosed porches on the first and second floor with windows of metal screen material. Back stairs are wooden with a wooden handrail. The house is constructed on a hillside, descending at the building’s northeastern corner, revealing more of the building’s basement at that corner.

The house is located on a small lot with picket fence and multiple mature trees. There is no apparent landscape plan other than a mowed front lawn with concrete walkway, with small concrete retaining wall along the sidewalk.

Interior

The original front door opens into a small vestibule with stairs directly in front. The floor is of 5” planking throughout. The door and window trims feature five different patterns, including standard rosette, sunburst, and brace and bit originals. The baseboard is original in most rooms. Sheetrock has replaced lath and plaster on most interior walls. To the left are the front parlor with bay window and back parlor with functional pocket doors. To the right is the sitting room. The kitchen is to the rear of the building. A door from the kitchen leads to the laundry and bath on the rear porch. Another door from the kitchen leads to the porch, and to the back steps outside.

The second floor has a balcony above the rear porch. There were five original bedrooms, one of which was remodeled into a bathroom, and the original bathroom is now the hallway to the second-story back porch. The second story porch has glass windows and is completely enclosed.

Integrity

The two-story back porch and second-story porch were added in 1936, during the period of significance, to facilitate conversion of the home into a boarding school. The asbestos siding was added prior to 1962. The siding is obviously not original to the property, limiting integrity of materials and workmanship, but resembles the orientation and dimensions of the original wooden siding.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Irene Burns House is eligible for the National Register under Criterion B at the local level of significance for its association with educator Irene Burns, a schoolteacher who became the first woman elected to political office in Placer County, California. After three terms as County Superintendent of Schools, she taught developmentally disabled students in San Francisco, then established a school for disabled students in her Auburn home, known as the Burns School. The period of significance is 1900-1943, from her first purchase of the house as a schoolteacher in the city of Auburn until her retirement and the end of the use of the house as an educational facility. This property is nominated under the Architectural and Historic Resources of Auburn, California Multiple Property Document under the Residential Buildings property type.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

Criterion B: Irene Burns as Educator and Elected Official.
Irene Burns represents an individual significant under Criterion B for her role as an educator and administrator in Placer County, California. As a woman of the Progressive Era, Irene Burns represented part of a generation of women with expanded opportunities for education and political voice. Earlier female social reformers often worked as non-professional volunteers, due to women’s more limited economic and political independence in the late 19th and early 20th century. Women gained the right to vote in California in 1911, opening new doors for elective office, and represented a growing acceptance of women in professional roles. Employment opportunities were often constrained by perceived social norms, so many of this generation of professional women pursued education, employment and political office in fields like nursing, child welfare, sanitary commissions, and schools. Her role as educator and elected official brought her into contact with other female professionals throughout California, and mention of her work in educational journals shows her participation in the development of education in Placer County and its influence on other California educators.

The Irene Burns House represents the single property that best reflects Burns’ working life. Most of the schools where she taught are no longer standing, and while her office was probably in the Placer County courthouse, most of her work as a commissioner was spent in the field, touring schools throughout Placer County. The house was also used for educational purposes during the summers from 1930-1937 while she ran the Burns School in San Francisco, and as a boarding school from 1937-1943.

Irene Burns was born in Auburn, California in 1872. After completion of studies in Placer County schools and a qualifying examination, she obtained a certificate to teach. She supplemented her studies at Curtiss and Patchett’s Normal School in San Francisco, and classes at the University of California, Berkeley. At the age of eighteen, she took her first job teaching seven students at Deadwood, Placer County. Deadwood was a seven mile weekly commute from her family home in Michigan Bluff, via horseback on a mountainous trail. After her first year at Deadwood, she spent several succeeding years at various other small schools in Placer County.

including Blue Canyon, Foresthill and Lone Star. Irene then accepted a job in Auburn and spent the following sixteen years teaching in the Auburn schools.

In 1914 she successfully ran for the office of Placer County Superintendent of Schools, becoming the first woman to hold that position. This also gave her the distinction of being the first woman to be elected to any public office in Placer County. Her success at that job led her through two re-elections. During her time in this office, she was instrumental in forming several different school districts in the county and instigated the school nurse program. Being one of the first women to drive an automobile in Placer County made her quite a distinctive sight as she visited the schools scattered throughout the large county.

It was her decision not to seek a fourth term as Superintendent of Placer County Schools, but instead to add a new dimension to her career in education. In 1930 she went to San Francisco and spent a year in the public school system there. She then started her own school in San Francisco, “The Burns School,” and taught developmentally disabled children. This was one of the earliest schools in California to specialize in the teaching of developmentally disabled children. She returned to her Auburn home during those San Francisco years and often brought several of her students with her. They would receive room and board, as well as daily instruction in her home. In 1937 she returned to Auburn permanently and brought four of her pupils with her. They stayed with her and continued their instruction. She continued her work until retirement in 1943. Irene Burns died in 1962. A room has been named in her honor in the newly constructed Placer County Office of Education in Auburn.

The home Irene purchased in 1900 was built several years earlier by Roy Brown. She bought the home when she was twenty-seven years old and lived there throughout the rest of her life. She also made it home for her mother and, at various times, her brothers, sisters, nieces and nephews, as well as her students. In 1936, to prepare accommodations for the students she would be bringing home the following year, a sleeping porch was built onto the original house.

Accomplishments of Irene Burns as Placer County Superintendent of Schools

During Irene Burns’ tenure as Superintendent of Schools, she oversaw the construction of a new William H. Weeks designed school in the city of Auburn, in 1915.

In 1916, State Commissioner of Elementary Schools Dr. Margaret S. McNaught accompanied Irene Burns on an inspection of Placer County schools. According to the report, there were only two “insanitary” toilets of fifty-four county school districts. (“Rural School Trustees Improve Sanitation,” California State Board of Health Monthly Bulletin, Vol. 11 No. 11, May 1916, p. 611)

In 1916, Irene Burns encouraged Placer County schools to prepare booklets on Placer County’s historical places, using a student-prepared history of the Placer County community of Iowa Hill. (Western Journal of Education, Vol. XXII No. 8, August 1916, p.11)
Irene Burns House

From April to June 1920, Irene Burns coordinated an experimental education project, called the Los Angeles Adjustment Plan, a method of individualized education intended for small schools. The plan was implemented in four one-room schools and one three-room school in Placer County, at the suggestion of State Commissioner of Elementary Schools Dr. Margaret S. McNaught. (Sutherland, A.H., “Methods of Individual Instruction in the Adjustment Rooms of Los Angeles,”, Terman, Lewis, ed., Intelligence Tests and School Reorganization, Prepared as a subcommittee report to the Commission on Revision of Elementary Education, National Education Association, Dr. Margaret McNaught, Chairman, 1922 World Book Company, Yonkers-on-Hudson, New York, p. 70-72)

In 1921, Superintendent Burns reported on the success of the “Community Play Day,” a physical education program initiated in conjunction with Assistant Supervisor of Physical Education in California, Winifred Van Hagen, to the annual meeting of the School Superintendents of the State of California. This presentation led to the adoption of Community Play Day events in other California schools, including San Diego. Staff Report

Irene Burns House is a two-story Stick-Eastlake residence with a hip-on-gable main roof and a front-facing side-gabled wing, originally constructed in 1895. The building has been modified from its original appearance due to alterations to front and rear porches and the addition of asbestos shingles to the exterior. The property is nominated under the Architectural and Historic Resources of Auburn, California Multiple Property Document under the Residential Buildings property type.

The property is eligible under Criterion B for its association with Irene Burns, the first woman elected to political office in Placer County, California, and a pioneer in the field of education for developmentally disabled children. Burns was born in Auburn in 1872, began her career as a schoolteacher in 1890 and purchased her Auburn home in 1900. The advent of women’s suffrage in California in 1911 enabled her to run for the office of Placer County Superintendent of Schools in 1914, where she served three terms. As an educator and elected official she worked in conjunction with a generation of professional women of the Progressive Era, addressing issues including education, public health and the welfare of children. After her terms of office she returned to direct education in 1930, opening a school for developmentally disabled children in San Francisco in 1931, known as the Burns School. She later returned to her Auburn home, which was opened as a boarding school for developmentally disabled children until her retirement from education in 1943.

The building includes several modifications done while Irene Burns owned the property, including rebuilt front porch steps and an enclosed rear porch, and minor modifications to the house undertaken to facilitate its use as a boarding school. The period of significance for the property is 1900-1943, from Burns’ purchase of the house until the end of her educational career. The exterior asbestos siding, added by Irene Burns while she lived in the house but after the end of the period of significance, detracts from the integrity of materials of the house and is not considered a contributing feature, but the property otherwise retains sufficient historic integrity to convey its significance as the home of Irene Burns.

The property is nominated by its owner.

Staff recommends the Commission determine that the Irene Burns House is eligible for the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion B at the local level of significance. Staff further recommends the State Historic Preservation Officer approve the nomination for forwarding to the National Park Service for listing in the National Register.
