Description

The Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Building is located in the center of Fayetteville, just a block from the main commercial district and the Fayette County Courthouse. The building faces southeast along West Maple Avenue, County Route 8. The large lot is bounded on three sides by public streets also including High Street on the northeast side, and West Wiseman Avenue at the rear of the lot.

A paved drive runs along both side elevations of the building where a number of parking spaces are situated along narrow, grassy strips. A gravel lot is situated to the rear of the building. The hedge-lined front lawn is separated by a wide concrete walkway which leads from the sidewalk to the front steps of the building. Two narrow sidewalks curve from this walkway towards the corners of the building. The lawn also includes spotlights, a flag pole, and a stone landscape feature with torch that was dedicated in 1969 by the American Legion Lafayette Post 149. However, its gas line has since fallen into disrepair and it is no longer lit.

The footprint of the Memorial Building occupies the majority of the lot. Displaying elements of the Neo-Classical Revival style of architecture, the building was designed by architect L.T. Bengtson and constructed by Hill Company, Inc. The brick building has smooth stone accents and replacement windows and doors throughout. The exterior of the building appears in three distinct sections; the front, middle, and rear. The front section is two stories and has a flat roof with parapet topped by decorative stone coping. A stone water table wraps around this section of the building.

The main elevation is symmetrical and includes a centered section which projects from the façade. Centered within that section is a unit, five bays wide, which includes the building's main entrances – three sets of modern double-doors – recessed approximately 13 feet. This section is reached by a wide series of steps with hand rails which leads to a 9 foot deep platform the same width as the center unit. The platform is lined by a decorative railing. The five bays on the first story include rectangular openings with smooth stone surrounds. Six squared stone pilasters reach through the second story to the decorative stone cornice. Lamps hang on each of the centered four pilasters on the first story. They replaced the original lamps in the 1980s.

Positioned above the center bay, between the first and second story, is an inlaid rectangular stone which reads, "IN GRATEFUL MEMORY TO THOSE WHO GAVE THEIR ALL FOR THEIR COUNTRY." Two decorative round stones are situated to each side, symmetrically placed within each of the four remaining bays. Five double-hung sash windows are centered above on the second story. Metal letters centered in the parapet read, "FAYETTE COUNTY SOLDIERS AND SAILORS MEMORIAL."

To each side of this centered unit is a single window with stone surround. Two smaller windows are located above each on the second story. A double-door entrance with transom and modern aluminum doors is located on both side elevations of this section. A single window is above each.

The south corner of this building section includes a first story window with stone surround on both the front and side elevation, and a single window on the front and two windows on the side elevation of the second story. The north corner includes a platform with steps and accessible ramp with modern railing. An original double-door entrance is on the northeast elevation. It has a stone surround and covered transom. The doors have six lights in the upper half and a single panel below. The entrance is shielded by a metal awning supported by metal rods and brackets. Two windows are situated above.

The middle section of the Memorial Building houses the gymnasium and auditorium and has a wide, low-pitch gable roof. The side elevations feature four wide bays separated by brick pilasters which reach through the decorative cornice to the stone coping at the rooftop. The first story includes a series of windows with decorative brick surrounds. Each bay of the second story has decorative brickwork assembled to resemble rectangular panels.

The rectangular rear section of the building is three stories in height and includes no fenestration on the back façade. Five bays are separated by squared brick pilasters. The northeast elevation includes a garage bay, above grade, and a single door. The opposite elevation has series of small windows and a single door.

Interior

The building is entered through a lobby with terrazzo floors, exposed rafters, and plastered and brick walls. A plaque reads, "Fayette County Soldiers and Sailor's Memorial erected 1951 in grateful memory to those who gave their all for their county." A "Wall of Honor" plaque is displayed at the north end wall of the lobby. Erected in the 1990s, it provides citizens a place to honor loved ones who served in the Armed Services by inscribing their name, rank, and years of service. The lobby also includes a display case of Armed Services memorabilia on loan from local veterans. Stairwells off the main lobby include stylized metal handrails and glazed tile blocks along the lower section of the walls and are lit by period-style hanging light fixtures.

A series of double wood doors with small circular windows leads into the gymnasium. The original hardwood basketball court was replaced in 2012. One end of the court reads "Soldiers and Sailors" and the other end reads "Memorial Building." The court's center circle includes logos of the five branches of the armed forces. Original wooden accordion bleachers line each length of the court while a retractable basketball hoop hangs from each end of the court.

An elevated stage is located at the northwest end of the court. It is reached by a set of wooden steps at each corner of the stage. A brick pilaster flanks each side of the stage opening which is topped by a wooden cornice which reads "For God and Country – To the Last Full Measure of Their Devotion." The rear corners of the stage have metal spiral staircases which lead to the upper floor.

The upper mezzanine of the auditorium has seven rows of stadium-style seating around three sides of the court. The wooden seats have painted numbers and metal supports. Concrete steps between the sections have inlaid lights and metal rails. The walls in the gym are concrete block – with decorative bricks along the stage wall. The ceiling displays exposed metal rafters and has a mix of modern and original light fixtures.

A hallway on the left side of the foyer/Memorial Hall leads to modest public restrooms and locker rooms for both home and visiting teams and an additional stairwell to the mezzanine and backstage areas. The area on the south end of the foyer originally designated for veterans' organizations is now used as a concession stand and office for the manager. This office is also used for early voting.

The Fayetteville branch of the Fayette County Public Libraries is located on the north end of the building, mirroring the locker room area. It consists of a covered entrance that leads to a small vestibule. Over the entrance to the library stacks on the western side of the vestibule, a plaque reads "Laura C. Hopkins Memorial Library." There is access to the auditorium through the west end of the library, but this is closed to the public. An emergency exit and additional stairwell to the mezzanine and backstage area are located behind the library. On the eastern side of the vestibule, there is a restroom, storage room and on the southern end, a small reading room and historic archives.

The basement originally included an open dining hall, meeting rooms, extra locker rooms and a kitchen. It was converted into offices, a meeting room and a dispatch room in the 1980s for use as the Fayette County 911 Command Center. However, it has been vacant since the center moved in 2013. Fayette County is planning to use this vacant area as records management and preservation storage space.

Statement of Significance

The Fayette County Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Building, completed in 1951, is eligible for listing in the National Register under Criterion A: Social History for its local significance serving area veterans. It is also eligible under Criterion A: Entertainment and Recreation for its significance to the local community and county, providing space for various activities including sporting events, banquets, plays, and concerts. The period of significance is 1951, the year it was constructed, to 1966. The end date reflects the National Register's fifty-year cut-off date as the building has continued in the capacity it was originally intended and attained significance.

History¹

WV had the fifth-highest percentage of servicemen during World War II, with 5,830 killed in action.² It is not surprising then, that the people of Fayette County were overwhelmingly in support of a memorial to honor the men and women of the armed forces. On August 8, 1945, the Fayette County Commission issued an order in response to a citizen petition which garnered signatures from at least the required 20% of the voting population. The order declared that the county would erect a Soldiers and Sailors Memorial "in the form of a building for general usefulness to all the people of the county with particular reference to the needs, comfort and recreation of the men and women of the armed services."³ As part of the order, the commission created a Board of Directors. The Board, made up of one member from each of the county's seven magisterial districts, included Chairman Charles E. Mahan, A. L. Foscue, J.F. Reed, W. A. Johnson, Mrs. Nell Walker, E. R. Vawter, and B. J. Amick. Over the following year, these members were charged with promoting the building and the levy.

One way the Board promoted the memorial was by distributing leaflets throughout the county with information on the proposed memorial and a special levy to help pay for its construction. In part, it stated the following:

After the election has been carried, for the year 1946 a home owner or farmer with a $1,000 assessed valuation of real estate will contribute 30 cents and the two following years 15 cents each – for a total of 60 cents for his full part of the taxes to take care of the memorial.⁴

The leaflet went on to explain taxes on rentals and farm properties and then invited the public to hearings in which they could indicate their preference with regard to the proposed location.

The special levy was held during that year's primary election on August 6, 1946. The levy, which passed with a substantial majority, was expected to raise $75,000 with addition funds for the memorial from federal aid, the board of education, and private contributions.⁵ A few weeks later, the Board of Directors resolved that the building would be two stories with an auditorium and stage area for various performances and sporting events. The basement would be used for armory drills, farm fairs, physical education, and for the National Guard. Further, they decided, the memorial would be constructed at or near Fayetteville, the county seat.⁶

Though the construction of a memorial was approved, the location of the building was yet to be determined. One of the early proposed locations was on eight to ten acres of land owned by the New River Coal Company a short distance north of Fayetteville on U.S. Route 19. Preliminary designs for this location were prepared by Robert A. Sheffry, architect of Bluefield's old Municipal Building. These plans depicted a 100' x 180' building and included a Memorial Park.⁷ There were other proposals as well.

On May 7, 1947, attorney William G. Thompson appeared before the Fayette County Commission on behalf of the City of Oak Hill. The city offered to deed nine acres for the location of the memorial, at no cost to the county, and the Oak Hill Chamber of Commerce offered $25,000 towards the construction of the building if it were located in the City. Following Oak Hill's proposal, Commission president Guy Douglas asked for remarks from the Memorial Board of Directors. Chairman Mahan expressed his personal interest in the project and reiterated the general sentiment of the constituents, and the order of the County Commission, that the memorial should be in or near the county seat.⁸ The County Commission agreed unanimously by vote at their June 11, 1947 meeting.⁹

By the August 6, 1947 Commission meeting, the Board had decided the location would be the Wiseman property, a plot of land located in the middle of Fayetteville.¹⁰ The board then approached the Commission to retain Ludwig Theodore (L.T.) Bengtson, a prominent Charleston architect, to design the memorial, and by order on May 5, 1948, the Commission agreed to pay a $2,000.00 credit on his contract, which would equal 5% of the cost of the building and equipment.¹¹ Bengtson was active in the early to mid-twentieth century and designed many public buildings and homes including the historic Young-Noyes House, St. George Orthodox Church, and Fruth School, all of Charleston, and the Raleigh County Courthouse in Beckley. Bengtson was well versed in various styles ranging from Colonial Revival to Art Deco.

At this same meeting, the Commission authorized the purchase of a site in Fayetteville less than two blocks from the courthouse. The Commission decided on land offered for sale by the heirs of W.A. Wiseman and a separate lot from Albert Mullins. Wiseman was an early area blacksmith and prominent merchant who was later elected the first mayor of Fayetteville in 1883. For purchase of the site, the Town of Fayetteville, by way of the Business Men's Association donation campaign, presented a check to the County Commission for $16,000.¹² The Town also provided the county an additional $5,500 from the estate of Ms. Laura B. Hopkins who bequeathed to them the funding to build a library and meeting rooms, especially for boys and girls. The library and meeting rooms were to be incorporated into the memorial building.¹³

Shortly after the site purchase, American Legion Post 149 purchased the house directly across the street from the Memorial Building to serve as their new headquarters. This was an important event, given the relationship between the Legion and the memorial.¹⁴ In addition to the Legion and the Board of Directors, the memorial was also sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, their auxiliaries, organized labor, the Republican and Democratic county organizations, farmers, schools, civic, fraternal and service clubs and lodges, and families of veterans.¹⁵

Originally, the estimated $150,000 cost of the Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Building was to be funded with the levy authorized during the 1946 primary election and private donations. By 1948, however, the high costs of material and labor made clear that the projected cost was unrealistic. In September of 1948, the Board of Directors informed the County Commission that the levy would need to be extended another three years to help fund the newly projected cost of $300,000. The levy, voted on in a special election on November 2, was once again approved.¹⁶

In February 1950, the Board of Directors published a request for bids for the construction of the memorial building.¹⁷ On March 9, 1950, the County Commission awarded the contract to Hill Company, Inc. of Oak Hill which submitted the lowest bid of $286,667.50. The construction bid included alternatives which provided for terrazzo floors in the lobby areas. The building would also include a gymnasium and auditorium with a 2,500 person seating capacity, a library, and a dining room. Prather Brothers of Oak Hill won the plumbing bid, Heating and Cooling, Inc. of Charleston provided heating, and Charleston Electric Company of South Charleston won the electrical bid.¹⁸ The Commission also approved the hiring of a building inspector, C.B. Coleman of Glen Ferris for the entire construction project timeframe. He was hired on May 1, 1950 and the building permit was officially issued later that month.¹⁹

Though the contract called for completion within 360 days, over a year later, on July 25, 1951, the Beckley Post Herald reported the building was nearing completion and that Chairman C.E. Mahan promised an opening date of September 15, 1951 with a completion cost of $300,000.²⁰ However, the promised September deadline arrived with still work to be done. On December 11, Mahan was quoted in the local newspapers stating that the only remaining work included landscaping, exterior paving, and finishing touches, and that the building would open on December 20, 1951.²¹ Even before opening, community events were scheduled. The American Legion, for example, planned the annual Fayette County Christmas Dance to take place at the Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Building on December 23rd.²² Other activities planned before it opened included local high school and college basketball games, a polio banquet, as well as wrestling and boxing matches.²³

On January 1, 1952, J.D. Summerfield and Robert Kent assumed their new duties as caretaker and manager, respectively.²⁴ Their first year provided a full schedule beginning with an inaugural basketball game between Beckley-Fairmont and Fayetteville high schools on January 4th. In February, the Memorial Building hosted the Region 5 High School Basketball Tournament. The Fayette County Board of Education quickly saw the building as an answer to their indoor athletic facility issues and offered the County Court $4,800.00 a year for maintenance fees in exchange for use by all county, but primarily Fayetteville schools. This agreement, although adjusted for inflation, still exists between the County Commission and the Board of Education.²⁵

Throughout 1952 and 1953, the schedule stayed active with sports events, ice shows, plays, concerts and all types of meetings and entertainment. The Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Building was finally officially dedicated on May 30, 1953 after a nearly yearlong delay. The original dedication date was slated for July 4, 1952, however the Raleigh County Memorial Airport had scheduled their dedication that same day. The Board of Directors decided on postponement rather than competing with the larger event.

In front of a crowd numbering nearly 400, the dedication address was made by West Virginia American Legion Commander, Harry W. Miller who, in part, stated the following:

Today it is our privilege to participate in a service to dedicate this building to the memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice in the service of their country, and to those who willingly offered their lives for their country but were spared to come back to Fayette County.²⁶

The Fayetteville High School band provided music and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Color Guard presented the colors. Reverend Shirley Donnelly gave the invocation and Reverend G.J. Wilson presented the benediction.²⁷

Following dedication, the Memorial Building continued to host basketball games of all calibers, from the local Ben Argento Basketball Children's League, to contests between WVU and Marshall to the Harlem Globetrotters. Music shows from Grand Ole Opry stars to James Brown, Ice Capades, presidential candidates Hubert Humphrey and John F. Kennedy, and many local craft shows, boxing events and fairs have all been held on the hardwood. An annual Veteran's Appreciation Ceremony is held the Sunday before Veteran's Day each year.

Summary

Serving the Town of Fayetteville and the entire Fayette County region, the Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Building was an integral and significant part of the community upon completion in 1951. While its primary function was to support the needs, comfort, and recreation of local members of the armed forces, the building also provided an important venue for indoor recreation and entertainment for all the people of Fayette County. Thus, it is eligible for listing in the National Register under Criterion A: Social History and under Criterion A: Entertainment/Recreation. While the building has undergone some changes, such as replacement windows and a new gymnasium floor, they do not adversely affect the building's ability to portray significance under Criterion A.
