

FORT de la BOULAYE

first white settlement in present-day Louisiana, erected by Bienville in 1699 on this spot (then the bank of the Mississippi), prevented British seizure of the Mississippi Valley.

Fort de la Boulaye Site
Plaquemines, Louisiana

View of fort site, showing historical marker erected by State of Louisiana. View is west toward Mississippi River, which is about a mile away. To the right of the marker can be seen the Gravolet Canal, which provides access to the site.

photo: Frank B. Sartes, Jr.
negative: region one files
date: May 11, 1958

Fort de la Bourque Site
Plaquemines, Louisiana

Historical marker and Gravellet Canal

General view of the Northwest of the ridge

Fond de la Boulaye Site
Plaquemines, Louisiana

Photo: Michael Becker
negative: Southwest Region
date: November 1972.

View of the ridge from the southwest to the northeast where the ridge is cut by the canal

Fort de la Boulaye Site
Plaquemines, Louisiana

photo: Michael Becker
negative: Southwest region
date: November 1972

FORT de la BOULAYE

First white settlement in present-day Louisiana, erected by Bienville in 1699 on this spot (then the bank of the Mississippi), prevented Britain's seizure of the Mississippi Valley.

Fort de la Boulaye Site

Plaquemines, Louisiana

Historical Marker

MAY 10 1969

1:20,000

52-116

MAY 10 1969

CONTACT
APPROX. 1:20,000

U. S. ARMY ENGINEER DISTRICT, NEW ORLEANS
CORPS OF ENGINEERS
FOOT OF PRYTANIA ST.
P. O. BOX 60267
NEW ORLEANS 60, LOUISIANA

*Aerial View of Fort de la Boulaye
Plaquemines, Louisiana*

*Photo: Army Corps of Engineers
date: 1969*