DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The house at 7 Elm Court was built by Francis Newlands in 1890, two years after he married for the second time and moved to Reno. It sits on a tree-lined lot on a bluff overlooking the Truckee River in what was then the most fashionable section of town. The house, built in the newly popular shingle style, is a large rectangular building of two and one-half stories, gable roofed, with a single story library wing on the southeast side. The large, comfortable house was covered in redwood shingles with a cedar shake roof; both materials are now obscured by having been covered with asbestos shingle.

When Senator Newlands died in 1917, the house was bought by George W. Thatcher. It is at present in the estate of Mrs. Thatcher, empty and up for sale.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This large shingle-style house was the home of Senator Francis G. Newlands (1849-1917) from 1890 until his death in 1917. Newlands was a San Francisco lawyer and son-in-law to Silver King William Sharon of Nevada. He was the author of the Reclamation Act of 1902 which placed the federal government in the irrigation business, opening up vast areas of the west to farming.

History

Francis Griffith Newlands was born in Natchez, Mississippi, the son of James Birney and Jessie Barland Newlands. His father was a physician and his mother an accomplished musician. The family moved to Quincy, Illinois, to give the children educational opportunities, but James Newlands died in 1851, leaving his wife with five small children and little money. Mrs. Newlands' marriage to Eben Moore, a banker and mayor of Quincy, enabled Francis to obtain a good education. He entered Yale at 16 but withdrew in his junior year because of family financial reverses, taking up a government job in Washington and attending night law school at Columbian College (George Washington University). He was admitted to the bar in 1870.

Newlands set up law practice in San Francisco in 1870 and soon became wellestablished. In 1874 he married Clara Adelaide Sharon, daughter of William Sharon, Bank of California agent in Virginia City, Nevada, and one of the richest men in the west. Clara died after childbirth in 1882. Newlands nevertheless, acted as trustee for the Sharon estate beginning in 1885, an activity that required much complex litigation. In 1888 he married Edith McAllister, the daughter of Hall McAllister, the legendary San Francisco lawyer, and moved to Reno, Nevada, that winter, partially to manage the Sharon interests.

When Newlands moved to Nevada he had inclinations toward the Democratic party, largely because of sympathy for the South during reconstruction. The facts of life in Nevada led him to the silver question, and he worked for the National Silver Committee in Washington. In 1892 as candidate of the Silver Party with the endorsement of Nevada Republicans, he was elected to the House of Representatives. In 1896 when the Democrats absorbed the silver question, he returned to that party. He served in the House until 1903 when he was elected to the Senate. He served as a senator until his death in 1917. Form No. 10-300a (Rev. 10-74) UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

Newlands had a distinguished career in Congress. His quick grasp of economic issues made him valuable to his party. His most lasting monument is the Reclamation Act of 1902 which established the Federal Reclamation Fund from the proceeds of the sale of public lands. This fund paid for the construction of dams and irrigation projects. The farmers in the irrigation district then mortgaged their land to repay the funds which were used to build other projects. The owner-farmers got votes in the management of the project in proportion to the number of acres they mortgaged. Thousands of acres of arid lands were put into profitable production as a result of Newlands' bill.

Reclamation was not Newlands' only interest, however. He sat on the Foreign Affairs and Ways and Means Committees while he was in the House. In the Senate his major accomplishments include the 1913 Act for mediation and conciliation of labor disputes, the 1914 law establishing the Federal Trade Commission, and the segment of the 1917 rivers and harbors law establishing a waterways commission. Among his other interests were tariff reform and federal support of the arts. He was clearly in the group of early 20th century statesmen who believed in government by boards of experts with delegated authority from Congress. His long membership in the Senate Interstate Commerce Commission resulted in his chairing the transportation inquiry committee 1916-1917. Newlands died before the results of the inquiry were incorporated into legislation in 1920, but he was responsible in a major way for the reorganization of American railways.
