Built in 1828 on the order of one William Jenkins, Wheatland is presently owned by the James Buchanan Foundation for the Preservation of Wheatland. The Federal style house stands on the western outskirts of Lancaster, and despite its age and numerous changes of ownership it has been spared remodeling and major alteration. The only interior changes were those made necessary by the installation of modern heating and lighting systems. The house is square, of brick construction, two-and-a-half stories high, with a gable roof and north and south wings. The north wing is three stories high, with a pent roof, and the south wing is also three stories high, but with a flat roof, and a front door with a fan light. The main entrance is sheltered by a one-story portico with four pillars framing the arched doorway with its fanlight. At the rear entrance is an informal veranda.

The house contains 17 rooms, five of which are on the unrestored third floor, which is lit by three gabled dormers on the front facade. On the first floor are the warming kitchen, breakfast roon, dining room, parlor, and library. From the main hall, the stairway ascends to the second floor, which is given over to bedrooms, dressing rooms, and an exhibit room containing pictures, letters, and other Buchanan memorabilia. The ex-President died in a plainly-furnished back room on the second floor. The house's furnishings are all appropriate to the Buchanan period, and include many fine pieces which belonged to Buchanan. The library is furnished almost entirely with his pieces.

Surrounding the house are approximately four and a quarter acres landscaped with old trees, shrubs, and flower gardens. Outbuildings include the old smokehouse and privy. The house and grounds are maintained in excellent condition, and are open to the public.

Boundaries:

Beginning at a point on the southwesterly curb of Marietta Avenue 302' northwest of the intersection of Marietta Avenue and President Avenue, proceed southwest 701', thence northwest 264' thence northeast 753' to the southwesterly curb of Marietta Avenue, thence 295' southeast to the point of origin.

These measurements enclose Wheatland and its grounds within the bounds of its lot.

campaign, and was appointed by Franklin Pierce as Minister to England. Although nothing of extreme significance was accomplished during his tenure as minister, Buchanan was still a highly-popular national figure, and in 1856, he was elected to the Presidency. In the troublesome years before the outbreak of the war, Buchanan maintained his support of the South, but lost Northern Democrats under the leadership of Stephen Douglas. Buchanan relied on the decisions of the Courts and Congress in such key issures as the extension of slavery in the territories and the regulations of economic tariffs. At the close of his presidential term, upon the eve of Lincoln's inauguration, Buchanan's administration began to splinter under the strain of the sectional conflict. Buchanan continued on in an agony of indecision, and after participating in Lincoln's inauguration, he left the unresolved situation in the hands of his successor.

Upon retirement to Wheatland, he defended himself by the publication of Mr. Buchanan's Administration Upon the Eve of Rebellion. His continued local popularity is reflected in the fact that 20,000 people attended his funeral, after his death on June 1, 1868.
