The Shot Tower is constructed of brick laid in common bond. The tower is 234-feet, 3-inches tall, 40-feet in diameter at the base tapering to 20-feet in diameter at the top. The top of the tower is crenellated and has merlons the shape of a Gothic arch. The brickwork and mortar of these crenellations and that of the first three or four feet of the top of the tower are of a different color than the rest of the shaft. This suggests that they were rebuilt after the 1882 fire or as part of the 1928 rehabilitation of the tower. The walls are five-and-one-half-feet thick at the base narrowing to one-foot, eight-inches at the top. The masons built the tower working from the interior and so no exterior scaffolding was needed. The tower has heavy metal doors at the base and rectangular windows placed at random to light the stairs. These windows are double hung sash with nine panes over nine. The window lintels are granite. A window within reach of the ground has a wooden vertical plank shutter.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Phoenix Shot Tower in Baltimore, Maryland was built in 1828 to manufacture lead shot. It remained in operation until 1892. The red brick tower is an excellent example of the severe beauty that often results in industrial architecture from purely functional design. However the major significance of the structure is its impressive height of over 234 feet. Seventy feet higher than the Washington Monument in Baltimore, and 45-feet higher than the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse, it was the tallest structure in the United States until work resumed on the Washington National Monument on the Mall in the District of Columbia after the Civil War. Never a building type erected in great numbers, it is estimated that less than four shot towers remain in existence and that the Phoenix Shot Tower in Baltimore is the most outstanding remaining example.

History

(History prepared by the Maryland Historical Trust)

Known originally as the Phoenix Shot, then the Merchants' Shot Tower and now the old Baltimore Shot Tower, this building was erected in 1828 and its cornerstone laid by Charles Carroll of Carrollton. It is the last remaining of four such towers in Baltimore and one of a very few still in existence in this country.

It was used for the manufacture of shot by dropping molten lead from a platform at the top through a sieve-like device and into a vat of cold water, which caused it to harden. When dried and polished, the shot was sorted into 25-pound bags. A total of 1,000,000 bags of shot were produced each year and this capacity could be doubled if necessary.

In 1882 the interior of the tower was destroyed by fire, but quickly rebuilt and the manufacture of shot continued until 1892. Then in 1921, the Union Oil Company purchased the building, but decided to abandon it shortly thereafter. This caused a group of citizens to raise $25,000 by subscription and present it to the City. It was briefly opened to the public, but is now closed. A new Shot Tower Historic Park is being planned for the surrounding area.
