

BURT-STARK MANSION

Abbeville, South Carolina

East Elevation, front entrance to the house facing the intersection of Greeneville and North Main Streets.

Courtesy: Abbeville Historic Preservation Commission

BURT-STARK MANSION

Abbeville, South Carolina

Southeast parlor (Meeting Room)

where President Jefferson Davis held his last council of war.

Courtesy: Abbeville Historic Preservation Commission

BURT-STARK MANSION

Abbeville, South Carolina

View of east elevation, South Carolina

from southeast. Southeast corner of the house

Courtesy: Abbeville Historic Front (east elevation)

Preservation Commission of the south elevation.

Courtesy: Abbeville Historic Preservation Commission

SOUTH

CAROLINA

JEFFERSON DAVIS'S FLIGHT

Here, at the home of Colonel Burt, President Jefferson Davis held the last Confederate Council of War on May 2, 1865. He met with Secretary of War Breckenridge, Gen. Braxton Bragg, and 5 brigade generals; all agreed the only hope was for Davis to elude nearby U.S. cavalry and escape west. Though Davis passed safely through South Carolina, he was seized in Georgia on May 10th.

ERECTED BY
ABBEVILLE COUNTY HISTORIC PRESERVATION COMMISSION
1970

SOUTH

CAROLINA

BURT-STARK HOUSE

When Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy, left Richmond after its fall in April 1865, he traveled south, trying to reach and rally the remnants of his army. On May 2, he spent the night at the home of Col. Armistead Burt. In 1971, Burt's great-niece Mary Stark Davis gave this historic house and all its furnishings to Abbeville's Historic Preservation Commission.

ERECTED BY
ABBEVILLE COUNTY HISTORIC PRESERVATION COMMISSION
1976

BURT-STARK MANSION

Abbeville, South Carolina

Historic Marker on the grounds of the property, near the intersection of Greeneville and North Main Streets.

Courtesy: Abbeville Historic Preservation Commission