Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

Central College is a small, unincorporated village in northeastern Franklin County. Originally named Amalthea, the village was platted in 1849 by Timothy Lee who was a major benefactor of the Central College and the Presbyterian Church. His homestead, Squire's Glen, is located south of Central College and is individually listed in the National Register. The four buildings included in this nomination represent the well preserved historic resources of this village. Following are brief descriptions of the buildings.

7121 Sunbury Rd. This fine little 1½ story frame residence was built by Reverend Ebenezer Washburn in 1833. It measures 5 by 2 bays and has a gable composition covered roof. The distinctive feature is the beautiful, refined entrance flanked by flattened, engaged columns and a highly decorative entablature and frieze. Heart shaped and fluted fan motifs decorate the entrance. The six panel door is original. The windows are double hung 12 over 12 and a brick chimney is located at the north end of the house.

Two of the interior mantelpieces are intact. The one in the living room features the same flattened engaged columns as the front door. A fluted fan motif dominates the center of the mantel. The bedroom mantelpiece in the bedroom is much simpler with square pilasters and raised rectangular molding. A one story addition was added to the rear of the building.

Reverend Washburn moved to Central College in 1833 and lived in this house until his death in 1873. He was instrumental in the development of the Presbyterian Church in Blendon Township and Blendon Institute and Central College.

6972 Sunbury Rd. This home was built in 1841 on land donated by Timothy Lee for use as a parsonage for the Presbyterian Church. It is a 2 story wood frame building (now covered with aluminum siding) with a gable composition covered roof. The outstanding feature is the entrance with sidelights, pilasters, entablature and frieze. The windows on the first floor facade are double hung 12 over 12 sash while the remainder are either 8 over 8 or 6 over 6. The house originally faced south but was moved back from the road 100' and turned to face Sunbury Road in 1927. The house was used as a parsonage during the mid-19th century and has been in the Zimmer family since 1938.

Central College Presbyterian Church This well preserved church was completed in 1870. It is constructed of brick on a stone foundation with a composition roof. The church measures 3 by 3 bays. The entrance is located in the center bay of the facade at the base of the projecting square tower. A round arched stained glass window with "Central College Presbyterian Church 1870" in it is located above the double six panel doors. Blind arches are located on the sides of the first and second levels of the tower with louvered round arched openings above. The tower is topped with a crenelated parapet. All of the round arched windows are stained glass and set within recesses in the wall surface. A brick chimney is located at the rear of the roof ridge line. The building measures 36'x50' and was built at a cost of $4,276. Lyman Day was the brickmason and Stephen Huddleson the carpenter. A fellowship hall was constructed at the rear of the lot in 1955.

Central College - Fairchild Building This substantial 3 story brick building with a hipped, slate covered roof was constructed in 1875. It measures 3 by 3 bays. The entrance with double doors is centered in the facade. The openings, including the entrance are segmental arched with brick hoodmoulds. The windows are double hung 2 over 2 throughout. Projecting bays are located on the north and south elevations. A square cupola with round arched 2 over 2 windows and corbelled brickwork is located at the ridge of the roof. A denticular cornice surrounds the building. This building was built as part of the Central College Academy which was founded in 1842. The building was sold in 1895 to the 9th Ohio Deaf-Mute Reunion and is part of an enormous complex owned and operated by the Ohio School for the Deaf Alumni Association.

The four buildings mentioned are all located on Sunbury Road. Together they represent the important influences of religion and education on the development of the village.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The four buildings included in this nomination- Rev. Washburn Residence, Presbyterian Parsonage, Central College Presbyterian Church and the Fairchild Building - represent the well preserved historic resources of this small unincorporated village. They also illustrate the importance of religion and education to the development of the community. The buildings are significant architecturally as examples of the Federal, Greek Revival, Romanesque Revival and Italianate influences which were prevalent during the nineteenth century. They are unpretentious yet display an awareness of architectural styles and good quality craftsmanship. The properties are significant historically for their association with people and events which influenced and shaped the community.

Timothy Lee, a native of New York, moved to Ohio in 1807. He settled in Blendon Township and became the prime benefactor of the educational facilities and the Presbyterian Church in Central College. His homestead, Squire's Glen, is individually listed in the National Register.

The village of Amalthea was platted by Lee in 1849, however the beginnings of a community predated this. Lee had a dream of establishing a school in Blendon Township and donated 35 acres for Blendon Institute in 1832. Reverend Washburn conducted the school which consisted of three frame buildings - a chapel, boarding house and school. Later, in 1841, when the Presbyterian Church considered establishing a college in central Ohio, Lee proposed a donation of 100 acres and the construction of additional facilities if the college would be located in Blendon Township. In 1842, the school opened and the post office address officially became Central College. Although the village was officially platted and recorded as Amalthea, it has always been known as Central College. In 1841, Lee also donated property for the construction of a Presbyterian parsonage and later for a church.

Lee's dream of a college fell short through financial difficulties and ceased operation in 1850. Following that move, the buildings were used as an academy or preparatory school for the Presbyterian Wooster College. It flourished and was enlarged with the construction of the Fairchild Building (named after the first graduate of Central College) in 1875. By the 1890's, the school once again faced financial difficulty and was sold to the 9th Ohio Deaf-Mute Reunion and opened as the Ohio Home for the Aged and Infirm Deaf in 1896. The Fairchild Building is the only remaining building from the long history of 19th century educational facilities in Central College. It is now part of a large complex operated by the Ohio School for the Deaf Alumni Association.

The village of Central College is not much larger today than the 1849 plat and these few buildings still remain, relatively unchanged to remind the community of their religious and educational heritage.
