About 1820 William Shivers had a three story frame house built near the Ogeechee River on land inherited from his father. Since that time only one important - but easily rectified - alteration to this rectangular structure has been made. About 1890 the original raised portico at the second floor main entrance was removed in favor of a second story porch running the entire length of the façade. In early 1968 the house was in a natural state of extraordinarily good preservation when Dr. Olin Shivers, a descendant of William, bought it to restore as a second home. This restoration is being carefully guided by Mr. Edward Vason Jones, a recognized authority on the period of which the house is a particularly fine example: late-Federal, with strong-overtones of the Greek Revival.

A three story rectangle (about 52'X43') with a simple box cor-I. EXTERIOR: nice and gable roof with broad brick chimneys enclosed in the gable end walls. (Above the roof line these chimneys are plastered and scored to imitate stone.) The first floor, a high basement, is of handmade salmon red brick laid on a single course of granite blocks as foundation. A narrow band of this granite is repeated at the top of the brick at the level of the second story, which is the formal first floor. From this "stringcourse" of stone, clapboards rise for two stories. There are no wings or extensions. The missing original raised portico, which resembled a Greek Doric temple, has been drawn and will be reconstructed in the center of the facade. A broad set of steps will lead directly to the floor of this pedimented porch (supported on granite piers) and to the main entrance doorway (which opens into a broad hall off which the formal rooms open). The original glass panelled famlight and wide double doors surrounded by side lights, of this entrance, survive. At each floor level front, back, and sides - four symmetrically placed sash windows are framed by simple wood architraves, which are still hung, in several cases, with original louvered (non-movable) shutters painted a now-faded gray-blue. Exceptions to this rule are first, on the front, double windows over the main entrance; secondly, on the back, centered over the ground level entrance windows at each floor; and lastly, on both sides in the gable ends two windows instead of four. Ground floor windows are six-over-six; second floor nine-over-nine; and third floor four-over-six. (The rear east room windows on the ground floor, are barred, and shuttered with solid panels.) The house may be entered on the ground level - front and back - through wide, panelled doors opening into a broad downstairs hall.

Wide halls bisect each floor, front-to-back, with two 18'X20' II. INTERIOR: rooms on either side. The ground level hall is paved with large, well-fitted solid granite blocks. Otherwise, wood floors are found throughout with the exception of the dirt floors of the barred and shuttered "provision room" on the ground level. In the hall of this level, straight stairs rise to the high ceilings and formality of the second floor. The hall is ornamented with a surviving original plaster cornice ornately worked with eggs-and-darts entwined by a grape vine. Centered in this ceiling, and in the west front room, is a finely wrought plaster rosette with acanthus leaves and a fret of "Greek Keys." Each room on all three floors has large and tall fireplace openings; the chimney pieces, or "mantels", vary in quality and appearance but all are Federal in style and original to the house. The original doors, panelled in Greek Revival style, are all intact except for missing hardware. A graceful stair with turned balusters rises against the rear wall of the 2nd floor, with the landing crossing the middle window, to the 3rd floor. This floor is identical to the 2nd except for the lack of cornices, slightly lower ceilings, and the addition of a 5th room at the front, closing in that part of the wide hall.

A 3rd stair rises from this floor to the 4th floor which is one large room covering the entire house, not high-ceilinged or elegant enough in detail to be a ballroom, but entirely ceiled and plastered, with two windows on either side of the chimneys at either end. The chimneys, two at either end of the house, each serving 3 fireplaces (a total of 12 fireplaces) join in this room and appear as only two chimneys on the roof.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

I. The Restoration

Built for William Shivers about 1820, Rock Mill is a significant surveying document of cultural life on the Ogeechee River during the nineteenth century. It is not only extraordinarily well-preserved but is being carefully restored by one of William's descendants, Dr. Olin Shivers, an Atlanta pediatrician. Dr. Shivers, intending restored Rock Mill to be an educational adventure for all involved, plans to open it to the public as a furnished house museum while retaining title to and use of the property, much as people do in England. He has chosen a particularly well-qualified architect to advise him, Edward Vason Jones of Albany, Georgia, a recognized authority on American Neo-Classical architecture and decorative arts. The restoration is in good hands and someday can indeed be a three-dimensional reminder and gracious exhibit of a way of life which has passed.

II. The History

The story of Rock Mill begins not with William Shivers, who had it built, but with William's father Jonas, a Revolutionary soldier who migrated to the Oconbe Valley from Virginia. Born in 1750, married in 1772, by 1809 Jonas Shivers was living on the east bank of the Ogeechee in Warren County. (Rock Mill is on the west bank.) His house was the center of a tiny community now called Mayfield but then known as "Shivers" (see the Eleazer Early Map of 1818). Shivers was a small industrial "complex" consisting of a grist mill; a woolen mill for and baling; a store; a tavern; a horse-exchange, stage-stop and post office on the Augusta-to-Milledgeville stageline. William Shivers followed in his father's footsteps by becoming a mill owner too, but on a larger scale In 1811 he married Francis Pitts of Warrenton and soon thereafter he settled across the Ogeechee from Shivers in Hancock County. He built a grist mill of rock and then a frame house named for the mill. This was shortly before 1820. His house was large, three stories with an attic - seventeen rooms in all. The ground floor was a kitchen and storage area. The clapboarded house was a monumental plantation home for an early 19th century magnate. The complex of mills nearby surpassed that on the east bank of the river Powered by its waters, his factories manufactured "cotton goods and wool yarns," and carded wool for the local people. A quarter of a mile to the west, on three acres of his land was Rock Mills Methodist Episcopal Church, the lord-of-the-manor's church. When he died in 1852, he was a rich man; the appraisement of his estate clearly shows this. There was much property, many slaves, and much money owed him.On becember, 1853, Rock Mill was sold to William W. Simpson for $24,250. Simpson pperated the grist mill. In the ensuing years, the old house passed through many hands, with few alterations, before it was purchased in 1967 by Olin Shivers, a descendant of Jonas and William. And a new history begins.
