DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Christ Church, as it now stands, is a brick structure composed of the original rectangular nave, surrounded by brick appendages. The original structure is laid in Flemish bond with glazed headers on the south and west walls, and in English bond below the watertable and on the north and east walls. Both the north and south walls display three stainedglass lancet windows with flat lintels. Near the western end of the nave, a dormered gable pierces the roof.

The west facade features a round stained-glass window and a porch on which is mounted the gothic-revival belfry. The sanctuary addition on the east extends the centerline of the original church at a lower elevation; this addition contains a round-headed window and a jerkinhead roof.

On either side of the sanctuary extension, small rooms have been added; the south addition contains a door with a semicircular fanlight.

The roof is covered with wood shakes throughout, except the jerkin, which is shingled with slate.

The churchyard has been expanded considerably during the past quarter-century, so that it nearly fills the original square. A modern brick wall encloses the cemetery, in which are buried several well-known Delawareans, including Caesar Rodney, signer of the Declaration of Independence.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Christ Church was established as a mission of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in 1704; the present building has been occupied by the parish since it moved to this site in 1734. The site is one of two public squares set aside for houses of worship in the Dover town plan of 1717.

Most famous of the early ministers was Charles Inglis, later the first bishop of Nova Scotia. The parish declined after the American Revolution, and by 1859 the old church was near collapse. In that year, the parish sold its glebe and used the proceeds to renovate the church.

Much of the trim, the windows, and the interior fittings, of the church today were installed during the 1859, 1887, and subsequent renovations.

During the Revolutionary War, Samuel Megaw, a patriot, was rector of Christ Church. Unlike his associates in the Anglican ministry, Megaw was friendly to the American cause and to the Methodist missionaries. Among the parishioners of Christ Church at this time were Caesar Rodney (who is buried here), and members of the Banning, Ridgely, and Loockerman families.
