E PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Just off State Route 896, the Naudain house creates a striking impression as it stands alone among the fields. It displays the Early Georgian symmetrical elegance found in so many Delaware houses, in its five-bay, $2\frac{1}{2}$ -story center block, which is most probably its To the south is a two-story wing earliest section. that could possibly have been added about the time the house was built. \Formerly another wing extended in an easterly direction; the evidence for this addition can be seen on the rear wall. A belt course appears only on the front, or west, wall; segmental arches appear over the first floor and basement windows and doors in the main block. A square-paned transom light surmounts the door which marks the center bay. This feature is repeated over the smaller door in the left bay of the wing. The windows are long and narrow and show evidence of having once been shuttered.

> The hipped roof has been rebuilt; there is evidence to it was originally of that form. Now pierced only by the two chimneys, it once had several dormers on each side; the openings for these can still be seen in the interior. roof on the wing has been reshingled. RECEIVE

The house is now covered with ashlar-scored stack the stucco has fallen away to reveal the Flemish bond brickwork the west, or front, wall and of the side walls. The rear is laid The presence of in English bond and the wing in all-stretcher bond.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Naudain House derives its name from one of the foremost families of Appoquinimink Hundred, who owned the house throughout the nineteenth century. Before it came into the hands of Arnold S. Naudain, it was owned during half of the eighteenth century by the Schee family.

The house stands on land that was originally part of a tract called Mountain Neck or Lucasses Neck. This tract was repatented to Edmund Cantwell in 1679. Part of the tract was acquired by James Schee in 1760. He died intestate and the property was divided by the Orphan's Court amongst his wife and five children. Arnold Naudain later bought the property from James Schee's grandchildren and great-grandchildren, in small parcels.

It appears that the Schee and Naudain families were closely interrelated. The Naudains were descended from Elias and Gahel Naudain, Huguenots who fled France because of the religious persecution there. Elias died in England but Gahel and her children continued on to settle in America. She had four children: Arnauld, Mary, Elias II and Elizabeth. Arnold Skeer Naudain descended from Elias II through his son Arnold II and his grandson, Elias IV.

processay have been built quite early English bond indicates that in the eighteenth century, since English bond was seldom used in Delaware after mid-century.

The interior, although still describing its original center hall, single-pile plan, has been changed by its various owners. The present tenants have made a number of improvements in an attempt to restore it. The splayed window casings now have six over six sash; heating, electricity and plumbing have been renovated. The two first-floor rooms in the main block both once had paneled end walls, but only one of these remains. No attempt has been made to restore the other, although chair rails and crown mouldings have been restored Where evidence has shown they once were found. Both downstairs fireplace missing and these have been replaced with others of mantels were the period. Original paneling also marks the stair and the end walls of the two main second-floor rooms. A bathroom has been added at the top of the stairs. From the south end of the house one steps down into the wing which contains a bedroom and bath on the second floor and a kitchen on the first. A narrow winding stair connects the two floors of the wing. Below these steps are the steps which lead to the basement of the main

Before the rear wing was taken off, it held a kitchen, bath, pantry and two bedrooms. Early photographs also show a Victorian front porch with large pillars, and a tin roof. All of the outbuildings that mark a working farm have now disappeared, leaving only an ice house.

8. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (continued) --The Schee family descended from Arnauld Naudain.

Arnold S. Naudain was born in 1778, the only son of Elias Naudain IV and Catherine Skeer McComb Naudain. He was brought up on the Naudain farm in Taylor's Bridge. Arnold was married in 1805 to Jemima VanHorne. It appears that they were living in the house near Middletown several years before he began acquiring the land in 1809. He was a self-educated, intelligent and scientific farmer who made many improvements to the property. He was ordained a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church and he eventually retired from farming to devote his time to preaching, though he never accepted any pay for it.

He left his home farm to his son, John M., who had devoted his life to husbandry. John was active in the community and, in 1860, he was elected to the State legislature. His son, Richard L. Naudain, the next owner of the property, was also active in politics, although he was defeated in his bid for a legislative seat. On the farm, he was particularly interested in raising cattle and horses. After his death the property passed out of the hands of the Naudain family.
