	an Church was built c.1786-1789 and received minor alterations g conveyed to the Protestant Episcopal Church in 1836.
	Exterior: The exterior of this building is red brick with Flemish bond on the east front facade and common bond on the other three sides. There is also a belt course on the east wall. The foundations are New Jersey ironstone in mortar. A former stove chimney of brick on the west side is partly demolished. A former entry porch and doorway on the north, probably an Episcop renovation, has been long ago removed and bricked-in. The roof is gable with wood shingles and with a simple wood cornice. There are the original 12/12 window sash in original pegged frames, as well as two large 12/12 fixed windows on the west wall. Some of the glass is old and most of the wood shutters appear to be ori- ginal, with original hardware still intact. There are two double doorways with six lights above each on the east front with some original hardware, such as the decorative strap hinges. Also there is a small doorway raised off the ground on the west, with its original hardware, which is thought to have been used for coffins.
	Interior: The plan of the church is rectangular, but the origi- nal seating plan is unknown; although during Episcopal occupancy it probably had a center aisle entered from the north. The wainscot probably is original, of beaded wood boards with plaste above. The exterior wall changes in thickness about 8' above th floor creating an interior ledge. A former rear balcony, vestry and pulpit, all Episcopal renovations, are now removed.
	Site: The church is located near the southwest corner of a highway and a country road. The ruined stone foundations of a frame parsonage stand immediately north of the church. The site slopes gently towards Oldman's Creek on the south with a graveya south of the church.
