STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE Architecture

The Weston Observatory is a unique and handsome structure for the city of Manchester. Its location atop Oak Hill makes it a landmark seen for miles around and its strong simple design makes it a noteworthy structure in its own right. The building was designed by the Lowell, Mass. firm of Davis and Raynes and the building contract given to Head and Dowst, a prominent Manchester firm. The corner stone was laid by the New Hampshire State Grand Lodge A.F. and A.M. on September 7, 1896 during the semi-centennial celebration of the city of Manchester. The structure was dedicated and opened to the public with great fanfare on September 6, 1897.

The tower is built of granite from the Bailey quarry in Allenstown. The floor of the outlook is 50 feet from the ground, the outlook is 16 feet high and the total height of the structure is 66 feet from base to roof peak. At the time of its construction local newspapers proudly stated that it was so well constructed that it would stand for centuries an unblemished monument to its builder.

Political

The Observatory was built by the city of Manchester with $5,000 left to it for that purpose by ex-Governor James A. Weston at that time New Hampshire's only Governor from Manchester who was also a native born resident of that city. Governor Weston served two terms as Governor of the state and four as Mayor of the city of Manchester. He was a well known civil engineer having laid out a considerable portion of the track for the Concord Railroad and the Concord & Portsmouth Railroad. He was also known for his part in the design and construction of the water works for the cities of both Concord and Manchester and for his 1870 map of the city of Manchester.

Gov. Weston and his family resided in a house at the corner of Myrtle and Maple streets in Manchester. The site is now occupied by a privately endowed park established by a later resident. The observatory is therefore the only structure continued on continuation sheet 1

Recreation

The Weston Observatory was originally kept open to the public during the summer months and was a popular focal point for city residents who enjoyed viewing the city and the state beyond from this high vantage point. Governor Weston stated in his will that his purpose in leaving this bequest to the city was "for the advancement of science, for educational, purposes, and for the pleasure, enjoyment, benefit and mental improvement of the inhabitants of Manchester and for the people who may visit Manchester." The observatory served these purposes admirably up until the time of the 5-cond World War. The tower is a symbol of a more leisurely time when people found their recreation close to home and a walk or drive to a high vantage point was considered a pleasant afternoon's occupation. It was the place to take visitors and show them the young city of which the residents were so proud, and perhaps was also the magnet for young couples, as the hill was for evening "parkers" until the road to the summit was closed a few years ago.

During WW II the observatory was used as an airplane spotting post and after the war as a broadcasting tower for the police department. Due to these activities public use was discontinued and the city never again opened the structure to the public for recreational purposes. The observatory's present state of near ruin is directly due to this action and to the total lack of maintenance by the city.
