DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Scott-Yarbrough House is a small Greek Revival cottage which reflects local traditions by its use of a pyrimidal roof and square columns. Situated on a rise at the rear of a two acre lot, the structure faces directly west down Magnolia Avenue to the center of the town.

The house is of frame construction with overlapping white pine boards six inches wide, and rests on a six foot high brick foundation. The main block of the house is nearly square, measuring 46' by 40' and is symetrically divided by an interior central hall. Two bedrooms attached to the southeast corner of the structure appear to have been added not long after the house was completed.

A central portico, now enclosed with screens, is raised on brick piers and originally had curving double entry stairs. Two square columns support a simple entablature. The well-proportioned central double doors are pine with two long vertical inset panels each. They are framed with lights, five on either side and three above. The framing has been grooved and the vertical sections are topped with stylized capitals. The effect is that of attenuated pilasters. The windows on the front and sides of the house have two sashes, with six panes per sash.

The interior walls are plaster over lathes, the floors are of heart pine with six inch wide boards running the entire length of the room. With the exception of a few replacements, all doors have two long vertical inset panels on each side. The four main rooms have simple wooden mantels of similar design and the two interior chimneys are flanked by fireside closets which are unusual for this period in Alabama but are found in several small houses in the vicinity. The closet on the northern side of the house has a window matching those in the rest of the house.

With the exception of the room on the northeast all ceilings are faced with 12 inch wide boards with battens. The hall and the two rear rooms open onto a 12 foot wide gallery which has been enclosed. The two rooms on the southeast corner of the house have similar door and window treatment and similar ceiling. The flooring closely matches that of the rest of the house. Access to these rooms is by a door opening from the gallery and by two exterior doors.

A stair to the rear of the central hall leads to the attic which in recent years was expanded with dormer windows which will be removed during restoration.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Scott-Yarbrough House is one of the oldest houses in Auburn and has served as the residence of two men who played important roles in the history of the town and Auburn University; Colonel Nathaniel J. Scott and Dr. Ceil Yarbrough. Additionally the house with its pyrimidal roof, square columns and use of fireside closets is typical of the smaller cottages built in Auburn during this period.

Colonel Nathaniel J. Scott, who owned land in the area, was one of four commissioners selected by the state when the city was incorporated in 1839. In 1841 he entered the state legislature and was re-elected in 1844. He was elected to the state senate in 1847 and in that year constructed the house which he called Pebble Hill. During his terms as a legislator he became a close friend of William Lowndes Yancey, the secessionist, who along with his family spent several summers in the Scott residence.

In 1847 Scott organized the East Alabama Masonic Female College and later in 1856 he and other citizens raised $10,000 and persuaded the Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church to start the East Alabama Male College, now Auburn University. Scott served as a member of the board of that school until his death in 1863.

In 1871 Mrs. Scott sold the home and its original 100 acres to William C. Ray and the house changed hands several times until it was purchased by Dr. C. S. Yarbrough in 1912. Yarbrough served as a member of the state legislature in the 1920's, as college physician during World War II, and as mayor of Auburn three times.

The house has been recently acquired by the Auburn Heritage Association which plans to restore it for public use.
