STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This historic fork in the Oregon Trail was a point where many wagon trains parted company. Some took the short dry route to Bear Valley saving 46 miles, while others took the longer Fort Bridger route to Oregon or on to Utah and California. The dry route included 50 waterless miles and became popular during the gold rush period.

The cutoff route was established by a mountaineer named Greenwood in 1844 rather than Sublette. The route became known as the Sublette route when Joseph E. Ware in his Emigrants' Guide to California (St. Louis, 1849) through an error listed the old Greenwood Cutoff west of South Pass as the "Sublette Cutoff."
