DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The 21 Ranch house is a two-and-one-half story Queen Anne style residence. Its first story has been aluminum sided; however, the upper stories with their fancy cut shingles remain intact.

A shed roofed porch with hand hewn rectangular columns, brackets and a denticulated cornice runs the length of this east facade and wraps around the north side. Above the porch steps is a pediment supported by brackets. The balustrade displays a stick ornamentation.

All windows are double hung sash, and the door contains a Queen Anne window with a beveled glass transom above. At the southeast corner is a two-story bay window which terminates with a gable. A northeast corner second story, turretted balcony balances the bay window. The balcony has a turned column, brackets and gingerbread and its roof is capped by a finial.

The house terminates with a broad gabled roof. A shed coping separates the gable from the second story.

Both the north and south sides have outset, rectangular bays, two stories in height, which terminate with gables.

A gambrel roofed, frame barn is to the north of the house. It was built in 1921.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The 21 Ranch house is architecturally significant as one of the most pretentious ranch houses in Idaho and one of the state's better examples of the Queen Anne style. Located on the Waha Road near the base of Waha Mountain the house is clearly visible for many miles, making it a local landmark.

The 21 Ranch dates back to the early 1860s, when whites first settled in Idaho. John Siers and Joseph Schissler formed a partnership and irrigated the 21 Ranch pastures with water from Lake Waha. In the mid-eighties Siers moved the majority of the stock to Wyoming and in 1886 Schissler died, leaving the ranch to his heirs. Frank Ward, for many years the ranch's foreman became the overseer of the spread. He married Mary E. Goddard in 1886 and had the present house built after that time. The Wards resided here into the twentieth century.
