DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Brady Memorial Chapel contains the tomb of Governor (later U. S. Senator) James H. Brady of Idaho and a meditation chapel. It is an Indiana stone building designed in the Gothic Revival style. It is three bays wide and four deep. Small buttresses demarcate the bays. The centered entry bay has a slightly outset corbelled Gothic archway capped by a finial. All other bays contain lancet windows, originally filled with stained glass. A band molding runs under the gabled roofs' eaves and across the front and rear. Three ornate finials rise from the molding to break the eaves. Similar finials adorn the corner piers, as well as the gable ends. Iron ridge cresting decorates the roof.

Circular windows embellish the gable ends. There are no additions or alterations, although the building is presently boarded with painted wood to prevent the vandalism which destroyed the original windows.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Brady Chapel is architecturally significant as a concise example of the Gothic Revival rendered in stone. Its beautiful windows and handsome stonework exhibit fine craftsmanship and make the structure the best executed memorial chapel in the state.

James H. Brady was one of Idaho's major entrepreneurs and statesmen. He heavily invested in southeast Idaho irrigation projects and was the major figure involved in Idaho Consolidated Power Company. In 1908 he was elected governor of Idaho and in 1913 he was appointed United States Senator to fill the late Senator Heyburn's seat. In 1914 he was re-elected to this position which he held until his death in 1918.

Frank Paradice, Jr., was the major architect working in the Pocatello area between 1914-1934. He designed many of the major buildings in downtown Pocatello and in neighboring cities as well. The chapel is the sole known example of his working in the Gothic style. The Gothic Revival style as employed in this chapel is a more modest, less ornate rendering of the style when compared with the more historically accurate renderings of Upjohn. This more "modern" design reflects the influence of Ralph Adams Cram.
