Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

Located to the south of the Sioux Falls central business district, the All Saints Historic District is comprised of the All Saints School, built in 1884, Longfellow School, constructed in 1916, Lyon Park, donated in 1928, and 240 residences which are situated in an area bounded by Main Avenue to Fifth Avenue and 14th Street to 23rd Street in the City of Sioux Falls. The vast majority of residences were built prior to 1920, with 8 percent being constructed prior to 1900, 18 percent between 1900 and 1909, 50 percent 1910 to 1919, 18 percent between 1920 and 1945, and only 5 percent after 1945. Visually, this neighborhood is dominated by early twentiethcentury middle-class homes. Generally simple in design and scale, these residences, nonetheless, reveal a sensitivity to craftsmanship and architectural detail that was characteristic of that period.

Boundary Justification

This District was selected as consisting of the strongest concentration of 1900 to 1920 middle-class housing in the neighborhood. To the north of the All Saints Historic District is the Sioux Falls central business district, and most of the southern boundary is formed by the McKennan Park Historic District. To the east of the All Saints District, the buildings are somewhat newer and have received more alterations through the years, and to the west there has been considerable infill with modern apartment buildings.

Preparation of this nomination was conducted in two phases, both of which were funded by a grant from the Historical Preservation Center and by the Sioux Falls Planning Office. During the summer of 1982 the proposed All Saints Historic District was inventoried as a part of the All Saints and McKennan neighborhood surveys that encompassed approximately 26 blocks. All structures in these areas were assigned a letter grade during a windshield survey, and A and B structures were then intensively surveyed. The survey was conducted by interns Jill Coates and Eric Olson, who were supervised by project director Jamie Haworth-Smith of the Planning Department. The results of the survey indicated the potential for a Historic District in this area, and during the summer of 1983, Vivian Young prepared the nomination, again under the supervision of Jamie Haworth-Smith of the Planning Department.

The building of the 1879 branch of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroad and the construction of the All Saints School main building in 1884 led to the initial residential development in the District. Both modest and ornate homes were built in this neighborhood prior to the turn of the century. Twenty properties dating from 1880 to 1889 remain in the District. Ten of these buildings are simple worker's cottages - rectangular pens and cube houses - and tax records show that Artemus Gale and other speculators owned some of these properties into the twentieth century. The other ten houses are of more elaborate styles and include the flamboyant Queen Anne style Edward Coughran House, as well as two fine residences designed by architect Wallace Dow. This pattern of elaborate dwellings being constructed next to simple cottages is a dichotomy that has continued throughout the development of the District.

The All Saints Historic District experienced its greatest period of growth, however, from 1900 to 1919 when houses were built. The houses dating from this era are fairly modest in size and style. There are numerous fine examples of bungalows, cube houses, and one-and-a-half story gabled cottages that were home to Sioux Falls' aspiring middle class. Many of these houses still retain the attractive architectural detailing characteristic to homes of that period: clapboard finishes, textured shingles at gable ends, dormer windows, leaded glass, gables within gables, brackets and exposed rafters at the rooflines, as well as pleasing interior woodwork. Many of these buildings also feature foundations of quartzite--a locally quarried granite that is pink in hue. Speculators played a role in the growth of the District during these decades. In 1903, an M. Russell (possibly Marcus Russell, cashier at the Sioux Falls Savings Bank) owned a number of one-and-a-half story gabled cottages. Although based on the same general plan, these cottages feature different dormer and porch treatments. Russell rented these properties to tenants until around 1908, when most of these houses were sold. While the majority of homes from this period are fairly modest, there are also some outstanding Neo-Colonial, Tudor Revival, Dutch Colonial, Prairie School, and Mediterranean-influenced houses represented in the neighborhood.

The pace of development slowed considerably in the 1920s and following decades. From 1940 into the 1970s, several apartment buildings were constructed, and some single family residences were converted into apartments in 1980; however, the area south of 18th Street was downzoned to RD Duplex and RS-2 Single Family. North of 18th Street is still zoned for apartments.

The strength of this District rests in its concentration of early twentieth century homes. These buildings are from one to two-and-a-half stories in height and for the most part have remained unaltered, with the exception of some homes which have non-original siding or have had their front porches enclosed.

In all, the District included 243 properties. These properties were evaluated in terms of their architectural merit and integrity. There are: 27 A properties, landmarks which are of outstanding architectural style and which remain substantially unaltered; 124 B properties, structures of strong architectural merit which contribute to the character of the District; 64 C properties, which are either good but not distinctive examples of the architecture of the period, or are structures which were distinctive but have been somewhat altered over the years; and 28 D properties, those structures built after 1945, and those built in 1945 and prior which have been drastically altered over the years.

capped with tile roofs. These towers give the building a Mediterranean flavor, and other decorative motifs reflect a Tudor influence. The outermost wings of the front facade are topped with concrete in a crenelated pattern. The side facades are also crenelated with inset placques. Tudor arch entrances have small stained glass transoms. To the east of the school is a blacktop playground. The interior of the building has been modernized with asbestos tile floors and ceilings, but the rooms retain much of the original woodwork on the walls. The attractive auditorium features a beamed ceiling with decorative plaster brackets.

Designed by architects Perkins and McWayne, this school originally held classes for grades one through eight. The building is now an elementary school. In 1932, Perkins and McWayne designed an 18 room addition to the school, and in 1968 architect Ward Whitwam enclosed a central courtyard to make a library.

This attractive building is significant as a well-designed school that has served the community for close to 70 years.

3. Lyons Park Donated: 1928 Phillips Avenue and 14th Street

An attractive neighborhood rest spot, this 150 by 475 foot park was donated to the city in 1928 by William H. and Winona Axtell Lyon. The park features quartzite-walled flower beds, a six-inch Civil War cannon, playground equipment and scattered shade trees. The park used to feature a sunken garden and a flag pole.

This park is significant for its pleasant landscaping and because it was a gift of the Lyons. William and Winona Lyon both played active roles in local civic affairs and donated considerable property to the city.

4. Dennis McKinney House Built: 1912 701 South Phillips Avenue

This one-and-a-half story Neo-Colonial cottage features a prominent gable dormer, and is surrounded by an enclosed one-story porch which was added in 1914. The foundation of the house is of quartzite, and the interior of the building features original mahogany woodwork, egg and dart carving around the fireplace, and beveled glass windows and mirrors throughout. Original brass and crystal light fixtures remain in some rooms. The front lawn is terraced.

This home is significant as a good example of the Neo-Colonial cottage which has received few alterations over the years. It is also significant as the home of a prominent early Sioux Falls resident, Dennis McKinney. This house was built for McKinney of the McKinney-Beveridge Auto Company, and he lived here until the 1920s. A graduate from the University of Pennsylvania Department of Medicine, McKinney became actively involved in Sioux Falls commerce upon his arrival in the city in 1881. He was connected with the bank of Eaton, McKinney and Scougal, was manager of the McKinney Loan and Investment Company. He was also associated with the Sioux Falls National Bank since its founding, and became its president in 1890. He served as the first president of the Sioux Falls Business Men's League, and was alderman from the Sixth Ward for three years.

715-717 South Phillips Avenue

Resting on a quartzite watertable, this elaborate two-story Neo-Colonial residence has a two-story front porch supported by fluted columns with ornate Ionic capitals. Similar pilasters decorate the main building, and both the building and the porch feature wooden dentils and brackets at the roofline. The central and slightly recessed entrance has sidelights and a transom with mullions, and the door has a large beveled glass panel. Simple balustrades at the first and second floors of the porch re-enforce the exuberant nature of this building.

Originally a four-plex, this building was first occupied by Charles Parshall, secretary and superintendent of A. Beach Printing Company, and his wife, Robena, Frank I. Putnam, a partner in Putnam and Putnam, physicians, and his wife, Gertrude, Harry Pomeroy, secretary of Sioux Falls Paper Company, and his wife, June, and Roy G. Stevens, of Stevens and Nessa, physicians and surgeons. Through the years, the two first-story apartments have remained basically unaltered. While the two second-story apartments have been combined into one, original, unpainted woodwork remains throughout the structure. This four-plex is significant as an outstanding example of the Neo-Colonial style of architecture.

 Jacob Schaetzel, Jr. - William Lyon House Built: 1881 746 South Phillips Avenue Moved: 1906

Carpenter Gothic elements highlight this two-story rectangular pen. There is decorative bargeboard at the gables, and the interiors of the gables are decorated with patterned shingles. Elongated windows reveal the older age of this structure, and simple balustrades ornament the porch and porch roof. The addition of several gables and dormers to this building around the turn of the century gives this building a Queen Anne flavor, and in 1923 the house was stuccoed. The Lyon's House has the distinction of being the only residence in Sioux Falls known to have a black quartzite foundation. The southern door features leaded glass sidelights which came from the old Sherman House at 103 West 18th Street.

Jacob Schaetzel, Jr., was the original owner of this house when it was located at the site of Washington High School. Schaetzel was elected village president in 1882, and promptly campaigned to have Sioux Falls incorporated as a city. When Sioux Falls did achieve city status in 1883, Schaetzel was elected its first mayor, and served a two-year term. In 1891 he served on the Germainia Verein, and then was elected city commissioner from 1893 until 1895.

When, in 1904, the Sioux Falls school system was authorized to build Washington High School on the site of the Schaetzel's home, the Schaetzels moved, and in 1905 sold the house to William and Winona Axtell Lyon.

The Lyons moved the house to its current site in 1906. Between 1917 and 1929, William Lyon served as a state representative and authored the state's Workman's Compensation Law. In 1885 he wrote The People's Problem, the first copyrighted book in the territory. Lyon donated numerous gifts to the city, including land adjacent to his house for use as a park, and a church building to be used as a public library. Winona Axtell Lyon also donated consideration land to the city, including Winona Park, Axtell Park, Lyon Lodge, Lyon Parkground, as well as land for Palisades Park. In addition, she was responsible for having the city's "History Club" become a member of the State Federation of Women's Clubs in 1901. Mrs. Lyon lived in this house until her death in 1949.

The significance of this house rests in the fact that it was the home to two prominent Sioux Falls families, the Schaetzels and the Lyons, and that it is a good example of Carpenter Gother architecture.

7. Arthur B. Hewson House Built: 1915 804 South Phillips Avenue

The attractive quartzite stonework of the front porch and the numerous bracketed gables give this bungalow a distinctive appearance. The front porch is composed of a quartzite base and pillars surmounted by wooden semi-elliptical arches. The massing of this building is rather unusual. The main portion has a gabled dormer on the front facade, and to the rear there extends a two-story gabled addition.

Arthus B. and Agnes Hewson were the first residents of this bungalow. He was the local manager of the Wisconsin Granite Company. From c. 1910 until the end of World War I this company took over the Bennett Quarry on Weber Avenue, and produced local stone. This helps to explain the extensive use of quartzite in this dwelling. This building is significant because it is a fine example of the bungalow style, and it makes extensive and unusual use of quartzite.

8. Charles A. Christopherson House Built: 1903 1000 South Phillips Avenue

A careful paint job highlights the many architectural details of this one-and-ahalf story clapboard cottage. Distinctive features include a prominent front gabled dormer with an oculus, slender columns and a balustrade, and a two-story bay at the northern facade. This bay has some leaded glass windows, and dentils, and is surmounted by a balustrade and oculus. The first-story front porch also has slender tapered columns and dentils.

The first resident of this house was Charles A. Christopherson, a lawyer, who lived here for over fifty years. Christopherson moved to Sioux Falls in 1890, and in addition to practicing as a lawyer, he was a member of the school board for ten years and served as its president for three of those years. He twice served on the state legislature, and was Speaker of the House at one regular and one special session. He became president of the Union Savings Association in 1916, and served until elected to Congress in 1918. Until 1932 he served in Continuation sheet

9. W. L. Baker House 1301 South Phillips Avenue

> A fine example of the Georgian Revival Cottage, this two-and-a-half story clapboarded residence features a first-story porch supported by elaborate Ionic Order columns. Dentils highlight the porch roof, and there are small brackets under the eaves of the main roof. Further attractions of this pyramidal roofed structure include the three hipped dormers, capitaled cornerboards, the main facade oculus, two bays on the south facade, and a quartzite foundation. The central hall floor plan remains intact, and the house still retains some of its original interior woodwork.

Built: 1890

The earliest owner of this property was E. L. Smith, proprietor of E. L. Smith and Company, Star Coal and Wood Yard, who resided at 428 West Seventh Street. By 1895, Edwin A. Sherman, the real estate agent who had originally platted this land, owned the property. Sherman subsequently turned it over to the Southwestern Investment Company, of which he was the president. This company owned the land until at least 1908. From 1901 until 1917, William L. and Sarah Baker lived here. He was cashier of the Minnehaha National Bank, secretary of the Sioux Falls Trust Company, and president of the Mount Pleasant Cemetery Association. Baker would become president of the Minnehaha National Bank, and in 1918 he and his wife moved to their new home at 503 East 21st Street. The Baker House on Phillips Avenue is significant because of its assocation with the Baker family, and because it is a well-maintained pre-twentieth century example of the Georgian Revival Cottage style.

10. Daniel Glidden Duplex 1109 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1900

Originally constructed as a duplex, this large building now contains four apartments. The foundation of this dwelling is of quartzite, the first story is executed in buff-colored brick and the second story is of clapboard. A one-story porch extends across the front facade and is supported by Doric columns. Dentils animate the porch and gabled main roofline, and the windows feature attractive leading. Second story overhang on the side facades are supported by ornate brackets. The interior still features original egg-anddart molding, and the staircase has a stained glass window and a bas relief plaque.

Daniel and Josephine Glidden had this duplex constructed in 1900 so that they could live in one half and Josephine's parents could live in the other. The Gliddens arrived in Sioux Falls in 1878, and over the years, Daniel operated a boot and shoe business, served as a member of the territorial executive committee of the Democratic Party, and was elected warden of the South Dakota Penitentiary. One of the original members of the Ladies' History Club in 1879, Josephine Glidden helped to secure approximately 4000 books and deeded to the city a lot for the 1901 Carnegie Library. She also organized the Women's Study Club which met from 1902 until the 1950s. This building is significant both because of its attractive architectural detailing and because Daniel and Josephine Glidden were important civic leaders.

11. D. Clinton Jewett House Built: 1916 1309 South Phillips Avenue

Tudor Revival is the style of this two-story residence. Finished in stucco with pseudo half timbering, the building has irregular massing, projecting bays, and exposed rafters under the eaves. A second-story jetty extending over a first-story bay contributes to the medieval effect of the structure. The foundation is of brick, and numerous gables animate the roofline.

This house was built for Martin C. Smith, vice president of Sioux Falls National Bank. In 1920, D. Clinton Jewett, of Jewett Brothers and Jewett, first wholesale grocers in South Dakota bought the house. This residence is significant as a good example of the Tudor Revival style and because, for over 60 years, it was the home of members of the Jewett family.

12. The Dunham Hospital Building Built: 1900 601 South First Avenue

Of the Neo-Colonial style, this two-and-a-half story hipped-roof residence features a quartzite foundation and a clapboard finish. Classical details include a central pavillion with an oculus in the pediment, Ionic order columns supporting the first-story porch, pilasters on the front facade, and dentils at the porch and main rooflines. The central front entrance and central second-story window both feature fluted pilasters, and the windows are 12/1.

W. W. Brookings, et. al., payed the taxes on this property from 1900 until at least 1908. Brookings was a representative of the Western Town Company of Dubuque, Iowa, the first company to claim land in Sioux Falls. He served as district attorney of Minnehaha County, was associate justice of the Supreme Court of South Dakota from 1869 until 1876, was a member of two constitutional conventions, and was involved in several local businesses. From c. 1904 until 1912 this building served as the Dunham Hospital. A private hospital, this facility was operated by Dr. Whitfield O. Dunham. He and his wife, Clara, also lived here during that period. This building is significant as a fine example of the Neo Classical style of architecture, and because it served the City of Sioux Falls as a hospital.

13. Wallace Dow House 700 South First Avenue Built: 1885 Architect: Wallace Dow

Irregular massing and an animated roofline indicate this one-and-a-half story building's Queen Anne origins. This dwelling rests on an unusual uncoursed quartzite foundation. The first story has been finished in non-original siding, but the remainder of the building retains its original shingles and ornamental woodwork. The main facade is composed of a series of gable ends decorated with brackets and floral and geometric motifs. The main gable features a small balcony, and side facades have projecting bays and a small turret Pipestone steps and a quartzite sidewalk lead up to the house.

Prominent Sioux Falls architect Wallace Dow designed and built this dwelling. Dow moved to Sioux Falls in 1880 and soon became known as one of the best architects in the state. He designed the Minnehaha Courthouse, the All Saints School for which this district is named, the State Penitentiary, and several other Sioux Falls civic, commercial, and residential structures. Dow lived in this house at 700 South First Avenue until 1900, when he moved to the duplex to the south. This building is significant as a good example of Queen Anne architecture and because it was designed and inhabited by a major Sioux Falls architect, Wallace Dow.

14. Wallace Dow DuplexBuilt: 18704 - 706 South First AvenueArchitect:

Built: 1895 Architect: Wallace Dow

This two-story Tudor Revival-inspired duplex is finished in clapboard and features a number of interesting architectural details. The foundation is of uncoursed quartzite, and the jettied second story is supported by brackets and has pseudo half timbering. Dentils at the roofline, leaded glass windows, and first-story bays contribute to the decorative flavor of this building. The interior includes built-in buffets with leaded glass doors, marble mantled fireplaces, and stained glass windows in the stairway landings.

Designed and built by Wallace Dow, this duplex was completed in 1900. Wallace and wife, Lois, lived in the northern apartment until he died in 1911 and she died in 1919. Son Edwin W. Dow and his wife, Hattie, lived in the southern apartment until their deaths in the 1950s. The building is still owned by members of the Dow family, and they rent the apartments. This duplex is significant because it is an innovative example of Tudor Revival-inspired architecture, it was designed by Wallace Dow, and it served as the Dow family residence for so many years.

15. Erick Swenson HouseBuilt: 19001118 South First Avenue

This one-and-a-half story residence has irregular massing, and the first story is finished in clapboard. The half story is executed in a combination of regular and fishscale shingles, and the front gabled dormer also features a window with bracketed hood and a round plaque with an engraved flower. A simple one-story porch extends across the front facade, and the northern facade features a second-story bay supported by brackets.

Erick Swenson purchased this property in 1900, and in 1907 William Swenson started boarding at this house. William Swenson was a billing clerk at the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroad and lived here until 1912.

16. Edward Coughran House Built: 1887 1203 South First Avenue

On the National Register.

17. Robert Perkins HouseBuilt: 19121114 South Second AvenueArchitect: Robert Perkins

The front portion of this building is a one-and-a-half story bungalow, and a two-story section extends to the rear. The bungalow features a running bond brick foundation, and tapered pillars support the porch roof. The first story is of clapboard, and the interiors of the gables are finished in shingle and have brackets. Ornamental exposed rafters extend from under the eaves. The rear portion of the building is finished in clapboard at the first story and shingle at the second. Massive pilasters decorate the corners of this part of the building.

This dwelling is significant as a fine example of the bungalow style and because it was designed and inhabited by architect Robert Perkins. In 1912 Robert Perkins, at that time a high school teacher, designed and built this house. As an architect, he was responsible for designing numerous Sioux Falls commercial and residential buildings. He lived here until 1916, when T. E. Jones, a physician and surgeon, purchased the home.

| | 1117 South Third Avenue | Builder: Henry Carlson |

The irregular massing, combination brick and stucco finish, multi-gabled roofline, and ornamental brackets and woodwork give this building a Tudor Revival flavor. The dwelling is two-and-a-half stories tall, and the entrance features a hooded porch supported by pillars.

Henry and Anna Carlson were the earliest occupants of this house. He was a contractor and ran his business out of his home. In c. 1918 he moved to 1119 South Third Avenue, and Edgar Wenzlaff, president of the Commercial and Savings Bank, purchased this home at 1117 South Third Avenue. The significance of this dwelling is that it is a good example of builder architecture.

19. Henry Carlson HouseBuilt: 19181119 South Third AvenueBuilder: Henry Carlson

Two-and-a-half stories in height, this building has a brick watertable and is finished in stucco. Brackets ornament the gabled entrance porch, the main roof, and a shed dormer, and a first-story window has a shed roof. The building is slightly irregular in massing, with a one-story sunroom projecting to the north and a two-story wing extending to the south. Continuation sheet

Significant as a fine example of builder architecture, this dwelling is also important because it was the longtime residence of Sioux Falls contractor Henry Carlson. Carlson and his wife, Anna, lived here until 1952, and the Henry Carlson Company is still in business today.

Item number 7

20. Thomas Y. Stevenson House Built: 1910 1201 South Fourth Avenue

This imposing two-and-a-half story Neo-Colonial residence features a two-story portico surmounted by a pediment. Dentils and a small window highlight the pediment, and the dentils continue around the roofline of the building. This dwelling features gabled dormers with Palladian-inspired windows, and there is a second-story bay on the northern facade. The living room window transom is of stained glass in a floral pattern, and the foundation is of quartzite.

This outstanding example of Neo-Colonial architecture is also significant as the home of Dr. T. Y. Stevenson. Thomas Y. Stevenson, a physician with T. Y. and R. R. Stevenson, and his wife, Emma, resided here, as did City Treasurer John Toohey and wife, Anna, and chairwoman, Naomi Rice. Stevenson was a practicing eye, ear and throat specialist from 1890 until 1942.

21. Sivert A. Christienson House Built: 1902 131 West 18th Street

Two-and-a-half stories in height, this Queen Anne house is finished in shingle and features ellipses at main and porch gables. The porch wraps around part of the first story and is supported by modified Ionic columns. The building has a corner tower, and distinctive features of the dwelling include the mullioned top sashes of the windows as well as an oculus window.

Edwin A. Sherman built this house for his daughter, Jessica. She was an artist, which explains the third floor studio with high windows. Edwin Sherman's house was located next door at 103 West 18th Street. Sherman supposedly was responsible for Phillips Avenue being the first avenue black-topped down to 22nd Street. In c. 1911, Sivert A. and Mabel D. Christienson bought the house. He was president of the Christienson and Dempster Company, which specialized in books and stationery. In 1917, the Christiensons remodeled the house, including putting in the current main staircase, and facing the tile fireplaces with brick.

This house is significant as an outstanding and well-preserved example of late Queen Anne architecture, and as the home of members of two prominent Sioux Falls families. This property was included in the All Saints Historic District because of its association with Edwin A. Sherman.

22. Roger Dennis HouseBuilt: 1912118 West 19th Street

Stucco finishes this two-story house. In form, this building is a flat-roofed rectangular box with ell. At the western side of the front facade is a one-story enclosed sunroom with a balcony on its roof, and on the eastern side is the tile pent roof. The eastern end used to be an open porch but was enclosed by Sioux Falls Construction and now contains a library and the kitchen. The western facade features the original entrance to the house. This entrance has fluted Doric columns and is surmounted by a balcony. Important interior features include beamed ceilings in the living and dining rooms, a built-in buffet in the dining room, and glass paneled interior doors. The basement is finished and there is also a garage under the house. Originally a single family house, the building now contains three spacious apartments.

Roger and Lillian Dennis were the first to live here. He was with Dennis and Dennis, real estate and loans. In 1918 William H. T. Foster, general manager of John Morrell and Company, and his wife, Jeanette, moved here and lived here until the 1930s, when the house became a tea room for a few years. This building is significant because of its Mediterranean-inspired style, and because of its rich interior detailing.

23. Cyrus W. Grannis House Built: 1903 104 East 20th Street

This clapboard cottage with quartzite foundation has the animated appearance characteristic of the Queen Anne style. The roof is gambrel and has several gabled dormers. Bays project from the east and west facades, and many of the windows feature leaded transoms and decorative trim. The building has two oculus windows, and an open one-story porch extends across the front facade.

The first persons to live in this house were Cyrus W. and L. Grace Grannis. He was with Graley and Grannis, boots and shoes. This dwelling is important as a fine example of the Queen Anne-inspired cottage.

24. A. Harry Beach HouseBuilt: 1924201 East 20th StreetArchitects: Hugill and Blatherwick

A Prairie School influence is strong in this two-story, hip-roofed dwelling. The first story is executed in running bond brick, with courses of headers and of stretchers as ornamentation. The projecting entrance is of brick and features a pyramidal hood. Decorative brackets and insets ornament this roofline. In front of the entrance are two pedastals with flower urns, and another pedastal with urn is to the east of the building. To the west is a one-story brick sunroom wing. The second story of the main building is of stucco and has brick insets in the form of crosses.

This was the home of the A. Harry Beach family of the Will A. Beach Printing Company. Beach had the crosses set in the stucco because of his strong religious beliefs. Beach lived here until his death in 1952, and the dwelling later became the Parish house for the Calvary Cathedral Episcopal Church. Significant as a good example of Prairie School architecture, this building is also important because of its association with the Beach family.

25. Frank T. Williams House 100 West 21st Street Built: 1918

Built: 1917

Finished in stucco, this two-story house features a central entrance surmounted by a semi-circular arched hood. A two-story sunroom wing extends to the east, and to the west is an attached one-story garage. The stucco finish, shallow pitched hip roof, and low wall in front of this dwelling gives the building a Mediterranean flavor.

Frank T. and Nellie S. Williams were the first to live here. He was owner of the F. T. Williams Company, Piano and Musical Merchandise. This company was established in 1887.

26. Russell Bell House 106 East 23rd Street

Stucco finishes this two-and-a-half story dwelling. Pseudo half timbering and dentils highlight the gable ends and gabled entrance hood, giving the building a Tudor Revival flavor. Contributing to the character of this house are the pent roofs over the two first-story windows, the stuccoed window boxes, and the gabled dormer.

Russell Bell, a bookkeeper at the Tri-State Creamery Company, and his wife, Ethel, were the first residents of this house. This dwelling is a fine example of Tudor Revival-inspired architecture.

27. Edward R. Tornberg House Built: 1919 110 East 23rd Street

Tudor Revival characteristics can be seen in this two-story house. The dwelling is finished in stucco and features pseudo half timbering, ellipses and brackets at the gable ends. To the front of the building is a two-story wing with a brick watertable and bands of windows.

Edward R. and Minnie Tornberg were the first to live here. He was with the Lembkey-Tornberg Auto Company. This attractive structure is a good example of Tudor Revival-inspired architecture.

The first city directory listing of this building is in 1931 when the residents of the apartments were Harry N. Hanson, owner of this building, Thomas F. Dunne, with the Dakota Dental Supply Company, Manley A. Price, a collector, Charles E. Wood, a salesman, Mrs. Helen A. Wheeler, widow, Earl E. Gage, vice president of Sioux Falls Medical and Surgical Clinic, Calvin P. Dalbey, Louis G. Glieve, department manager at Fantle Brothers, and Alf Sanow, janitor at the Orpheum Theater.

29. 703 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1916

Distinctive wood trim and deep eaves give this two-story cube with pyramidal roof a strong Prairie School flavor. The building is finished in a combination of weatherboard, clapboard and stucco with rectangular wooden panels, and a one-story enclosed porch extends across the front of the building.

This house was built for Richard J. and Anna Woods. He was an assistant general agent at the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company.

30. 705 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1911

Well maintained, this one-and-a-half story bungalow is finished in a combination of clapboard and shingles, and has a quartzite foundation. A large shed dormer dominates the front facade and is highlighted with exposed rafters.

The first residents of this house were Harry E. Donahoe, and his wife, Marie. He was with J. D. and H. E. Donahoe, dentists.

31. 707 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1905

In form, this building is a simple two-story cube with pyramidal roof and center chimney. The oculus at the second story, and the one-story porch supported by simple Doric columns give this building a Georgian Revival Cottage flavor. The building is finished in clapboard and features cornerboards, shutters at the windows, and a quartzite foundation.

In the year the house was constructed, the land belonged to Charles O. Bailey of Bailey and Voorhees, lawyers, and in the following year the Minnehaha Trust Company acquired it. John H. Raynolds and his wife, Julia, moved into this house in 1911. He had no listed occupation.

32. 709 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1911

Exposed rafters, brackets under the eaves and decorative woodwork at the gable ends ornament this one-and-a-half story clapboard-finished bungalow. This structure has a large hipped dormer at the front facade, which extends over a first-story porch and sunroom. The foundation is of quartzite. This building was converted to apartments and the interior has been extensively remodeled.

John and Rose M. Bay were the first residents of this house. He was a plumber with E. M. Sanders.

38.762 South Phillips AvenueBuilt: 1910

This two-and-a-half story clapboard-finished cube has a gabled dormer, a one-story porch across the front facade, beveled glass in the living room window, and a balustrade on the porch roof. The building sits on a molded concrete foundation.

From city directory listings, it appears that the street address was changed from 752 to 762 South Phillips Avenue in the late 1970s. The earliest listing for 752 is in 1921 when Clara Raabe, a widow and teacher, lived here.

39.802 South Phillips AvenueBuilt: 1885

This one-story rectangular pen with ell has a clapboard finish and a quartzite foundation under the rectangular pen. The ell appears to have been added at a later date.

Until the early 1900s, this property was owned by Artemus Gale, an early settler and major land speculator in Sioux Falls. Members of the Budgett family have lived in this house since 1902. William J. and Elizabeth Budgett were the first in the family to live here, and he was a merchant who later owned a furniture store. According to family tradition, this building originally was two school houses that were moved to the present site and connected.

40. 805 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1919

A well maintained one-and-a-half story cottage, this clapboard-finished building has a prominent hipped dormer and rests on a quartzite foundation. The half-story overhangs the porch and is supported by delicate tapered pillars. Original firststory windows have leaded glass, and the front door features egg-and-dart molding around the glass panel.

Nora A. Frost was the first resident of this house, and in 1921 John and Daisey Johnson moved here. He was a sales agent at Adel Clay Products Company.

41. 812 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1910

This two-story cube features a quartzite foundation and pyramidal roof. An attractive feature is the hipped dormer with diamond pane leading. A one-story enclosed porch extends across the front facade.

Henry and Mary J. Langendorfer were the first occupants of this house. He was a partner in Langendorfer and Odell, proprietors of the Hay Market Feed Store and Sioux Falls Water Distilling Company.

42. 818 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1903

Large gambrel gables give this one-and-a-half story cottage a distinctive appearance. The front gable features an oculus while the two side gables have small Palladian windows. The building rests on a quartzite foundation and the first story is finished in clapboard. The interiors of the gables are shingled. A one-story enclosed porch extends across the front of the dwelling and the base of the porch is executed in randomly laid quartzite. This porch was added at a later date.

Until 1905, this property was owned by Artemus Gale, and in 1906, Josephine Fleischer, a widow, and Christian C. Fleischer, a dentist, purchased the property and lived here a number of years.

43. 834 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1906

One-and-a-half stories in height, this Dutch Colonial cottage features a gambrel dormer with semi-circular window on the front facades. Small Palladian windows animate the side gambrels. This dwelling has a quartzite foundation, and is finished in clapboard with shingles covering the gambrel areas. Distinctive features include diamond-patterned leading on some of the second story windows and a small bay on the southern facade. An enclosed one-story entrance porch is located at the front of the building.

Peter F. Gill, a clerk at Fantle Brothers department store, and wife, May, were the first to live in the house, and then in 1907 Frederick W. Sallet, proprietor of NACHRICHTEN HEROLD and wife, Elizabeth, moved here. In 1910 Frank and Josephine Neely became the residents of the house and lived here for several years. He was a foreman at the Haley and Lang Copmany. An addition was made and the building was converted to a duplex in 1946.

44. 900 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1900

Decorative features on this two-and-a-half story clapboard dwelling include a leaded glass living room window, dentils at the roofline of the one-story porch, and small brackets under the eaves of the house. The cornerboards have tiny Doric-inspired capitals, and two shingled gable dormers animate the roofline. This structure rests on a quartzite foundation, and a small, one-story bay extends from the south facade.

Artemus Gale owned this property until c. 1907, and then Daniel L. and Anna R. Billig purchased the property. He was a department manager at the Bee Hive Company.

45. 906 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1915

This two-and-a-half story stuccoed cube has a pyramidal roof and a quartzite foundation, and features hipped dormers at the roofline and a one-story bay at the southern facade. Across the front of the building there is a one-story enclosed porch.

Wirt H. and Harriet N. Allison were the first to live here. He was vice president of the Bee Hive Company.

46. 928 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1902

An unusual feature of this two-and-a-half story building is the curved corner window with an elaborately leaded transom. Two other windows also have ornate leading. Several gables and bays project from this Queen Anne-inspired dwelling, and this house also features several circular and arched windows. The building sits on a quartzite foundation and is finished with clapboard and shingles. The porch was modernized in 1973, and now has a concrete base and wrought iron porch supports.

From 1907 until 1955, the family of Marshall R. Brown lived here. He was a bookkeeper at Brown and Saenger, printers, and then became a manager at the Sioux Investment Company.

47. 1008 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1903

This one-and-a-half story cottage with prominent front gabled dormer is of the same design as the house at 1000 South Phillips Avenue. This structure, however, has been modernized with aluminum siding and some of the original trim has been removed.

M. Russell owned this property until 1906 when West and Carrie Babcock purchased the house. West Babcock was an employee at the State Agent Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company.

48. 1010-1012 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1903

Capitaled and fluted pillars support the wrap around porch of this two-story house. This building has slightly irregular massing and features a gabled central pavillion, a quartzite foundation, and a one-story bay to the south. Asbestos siding covers the building, and part of the front porch was enclosed at a later date.

The original occupants of this house were William J. and Elizabeth Keating. He was a general agent at the Equitable Life Insurance Company, and the Keatings lived here until Otis L. and Martha A. Ross moved into the house in 1911.

49. 1015 South Phillips AvenueBuilt: 1919

Finished in textured stucco, this one-story bungalow has a gable-within-a-gable at the front facade. Brackets support the gables, and rafters are exposed under the eaves. The interiors of the gables feature staggered butt shingles, and tapered pillars support the porch roof. Similar pillars form an interior divider between the living and dining rooms.

William Hinricks, treasurer at the Sioux Falls Coffee and Spice Company, and his wife, Grace, were the first to live in this bungalow.

50. 1016 South Phillips Avenue

Built: 1903

Basically, this building is a one-and-a-half story cube with a hipped roof, but the numerous projections give this clapboard structure a more animated appearance. Prominent gabled dormers project from three facades and are finished with shingles, and a bay extends to the south. An attractive feature of this building is the front porch which is supported with slender columns and has lattice work at the balustrade. This building sits on a quartzite foundation, and a two-story wing has been added to the rear of this dwelling.

While F. I. and M. Russell payed the taxes on this property until 1906. George E. and Allice Hill were residents in this house from 1903 and began paying the taxes in 1906. George Hill was a travelling agent.

51. 1022 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1903

Shingles and clapboard finish this two-and-a-half story Queen Anne-inspired house. Interesting features on the front facade include three arched windows, a small two-story projecting bay, and a modified gambrel gable. The attic story of the building protrudes from the main mass and is supported by small brackets, and the structure has a quartzite foundation. The front porch has been modernized with wrought iron supports and a brick foundation.

The earliest owners of this property were F. I. and M. Russell, and then from 1906 until 1915, George Fox, a photographer, and his wife, Libby, lived here. George Fox served Sioux Falls as a photographer from c. 1890 until his retirement in 1937.

52. 1103 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1907

Unusual architectural motifs ornament this two-and-a-half story clapboard building with gabled dormer. The first-story porch features massive tapered columns and curved balustrades. The roof of the porch also has a balustrade, and both the porch and main rooflines have fret band trim. A two-story projection on the south facade houses the staircase and is decorated with patterned wooden strips with trefoil arch insets. This building has a quartzite foundation.

This was the residence of Thomas H. and Mary Brown. He was president and treasurer of the Sioux Investment Company.

53. 1203 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1916

A well-maintained, two-and-a-half story cube, this building has a brick foundation, clapboard finish, and pyramidal roof with gabled dormer. The first-story porch has decorated pillars, and there is a one-story bay at the southern facade.

56. 1212 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1931

This two-and-a-half story frame Colonial has weatherboard siding and a gabled roof. The central entrance has sidelights and fluted pilasters on either side. Shutters and awnings adorn the windows.

Robert J. Meldrum, a salesman for the WZ Sharp Electric Copmany, was the first resident of this house.

57. 1301 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1915

Textured shingles, exposed rafters and brackets at the roofline, a shingled roof and a low, sweeping form give this one-and-a-half story rectangular pen a "Swiss chalet" appearance. The dwelling is decorated with ornately leaded and beveled windows, and the window at the peak of the front gable features a shed roof and tiny pseudo balcony. Originally finished in clapboard, the first story now features wide, natural wood siding which was added a few years ago.

Emil C. and Annie Goecke were the first residents of this house. He was a clerk at the County Auditor's Office at the County Courthouse. From 1903 until 1907, The Goeckes lived across the street at 1306 South Phillips Avenue, and from 1912 until 1915 they lived at 721 South Phillips Avenue.

58. 1306 South Phillips Avenue Built: 1890

This one-and-a-half story cube cottage has a quartzite foundation, clapboard siding and a hipped dormer. The pyramidal roof features a central chimney. Several smaller cubed projections, probably original, extend to the rear of the house.

64. 610 South First Avenue Built: 1905

This building is of the same pattern as its neighbor at 606 South First Avenue; however, this building has a wooden shingle roof and is in poor repair.

This property also was owned by L. L. Baker and then by Julius Pankow. In 1908 James O. Coombe, manager of W. H. Dickenson and Company, grain commission, rented this house.

65. 613 South First Avenue Built: 1911

Attractive features of this one-and-a-half story bungalow include the main hipped dormer, which is ornamented with exposed rafters, the bracketed front porch pillars, and the elaborately leaded glass of the first-story windows and main entrance. The building has a molded concrete foundation, and is finished in clapboard with shingles at the dormers.

William J. Urwin, co-owner of Pederson and Co., a saloon, was the first resident of this dwelling.

66. 620 South First Avenue Built: 1886

A two-story rectangular pen with ell, this dwelling has been finished in asbestos siding and the front porch has been enclosed. The interior, however, is quite intact and features oak woodwork, ceiling moldings, early fixtures in the dining and living rooms, and much leaded glass is used throughout.

T. A. Anderson was the first owner of the property, and by 1890 an M. Butterfield had purchased the house. From 1897 until the 1960s, members of the Toohey family lived here. Patrick J. Toohey was proprietor of the Pioneer Saloon.

67. 622 South First Avenue Built: 1880

This two-and-a-half story Queen Anne features a modified corner turret, projecting bays, and Eastlake-inspired woodwork at the front porch and gables. The building has been finished in stucco.

From the 1880s until 1909, John W. Hutchinson lived here, and he was involved in real estate. Harry T. Parmley and wife, Maude, then lived here until the 1930s. He was a well-known local businessman. In 1878 he and his brother Russell opened a fuel business. When Russell moved to California in 1903, Harry became manager and turned the business into a lumber company that continued to operate until 1980. Harry Parmley also served on the state legislature from 1900 until 1901, and was warden of the South Dakota State Penitentiary from 1903 until 1912. He was responsible for initiating the practice of having inmates manufacture shirts and twine at the prison in order to save the state money.

68. 703 South First Avenue Built: 1914

This simple two-and-a-half story pyramidal roofed cube has a molded conrete foundation and is finished in clapboard. Plain pillars support the one-story porch, and cornerboards ornament the main building and hipped dormer. The cornerboards have small capitals, and there is a leaded glass transom over the living room window.

The first residents of this house were Albert L. and Mary Wright. He was a photographer.

69. 705 South First Avenue Built: 1912

A clapboard one-and-a-half story rectangular pen, this building has a quartzite foundation. The half-story overhangs the first to create an open porch, and this porch is supported by pillars. An attractive feature is the large first-story window with stained glass panel. Exposed rafters line the front gable.

David S. and Sarah E. Guinter were the first to live in this house, and he was a physician.

70. 711-713 South First Avenue Built: 1915

Resting on a molded concrete foundation, this two-story duplex is finished in clapboard. It has a pyramidal roof, and dentils decorate the porch and main rooflines. This building has two enclosed front sunrooms, and the front doors feature beveled glass windows.

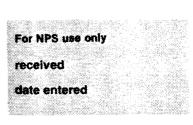

Edwin J. and Grace Williams were the first to live in 711 South First Avenue. He sold popcorn at the corner of Phillips Avenue and 10th Street.

71. 714 South First Avenue Built: 1902

This one-and-a-half story gable-fronted cottage has a quartzite foundation and is finished in clapboard. A one-story front porch is supported by simple Doric columns, and the side facades feature gambrel dormers.

The first owner of this property was Emma C. Mayne, not a resident of Sioux Falls, who also owned the adjacent property at 714 South First Avenue. From 1907 until 1911, this was the home of Arthur Jordan of Jordan and Jordan Millwork, and then until the mid-1930s, Francis D. Wilson, a Morrells employee, lived here. In the early 1940s, the second floor was converted to an apartment with a separate entrance.

72. 715 South First Avenue

Built: 1915

This bungalow features a triple gable within a gable front facade, brackets in the gables, leaded windows, front porch steps of colorful rubble-laid stonework, and the building has been finished in aluminum siding. An attractive feature is the four foot quartzite retaining wall which surrounds this and the two properties to the south. The interior of this bungalow has several notable features, including built-in oak cabinets with leaded glass doors, a fireplace constructed of Black Hills rock, a rock garden with fountain in the enclosed front porch, and a sunken rock garden in the backyard.

Bessie Quigley, widow of Thomas, was the first to live in this house.

73. 717 South First Avenue Built: 1917

Staggered butt shingles decorate this one-and-a-half story rectangular pen. The front gable features stick decorations, and there are exposed rafters under the eaves. A four foot quartzite retaining wall contributes to the character of this property.

The first residents of this house were Edwin T. Edwards, a barber, and his wife, Clara.

74. 718 South First Avenue Built: 1910

Clapboard and shingles finish this two-and-a-half story gabled house. A first-story porch extends across the front facade and is supported by a combination of molded pillars and Doric columns. Dentils along the porch roofline and a balustrade enliven this structure. The main roof features brackets and exposed rafters.

The president and treasurer of Sioux Falls Mutual Insurance Company, Zenas A. Hazard, and his wife, La Una, were the first to live in this dwelling.

75. 720 South First Avenue Built: 1890

This tiny one-and-a-half story cottage rests on a randomly laid quartzite foundation. The original building is a rectangular pen, and there are two shed roof additions to the rear. The shingled and gabled front porch was added at a later date, and the interior of the building has been remodeled.

From 1890 until 1906 Erick Swenson owned this property, but he is only listed as living here in 1900. The next owner was Mary J. Lunn who did not reside here either, and then from 1910 until 1911 Howard and Halcyon Gibson lived here. He was a bartender.

76. 801-803 South First Avenue Built: 1905

This two-story brick building is gabled and features arched windows surmounted by two rows of header brickwork. A second front door was added at a later date, and the gabled entrance porch also does not appear to be original.

Artemus Gale was the first owner of this house, and then in 1908, Fred and Sena Ward purchased this property and lived here until 1914. He was a letter carrier.

77. 808 South First Avenue Built: 1900

A one-story cube with pyramidal roof and central chimney, this cottage has a screened-in front porch and a shed roofed addition to the rear. The building is finished in clapboard, has a plastered quartzite foundation, and the roof is of wooden shingles.

From 1900 until c. 1910, J. H. Sherwood owned but did not live in this house. In 1911, Charles L. and Anna Phillips lived here. He was a hackman. From city directory listings it appears that in 1934 the street number of this house was changed from 802 to 808 South First Avenue.

78. 821 South First Avenue Built: 1916

An unusual feature of this two-and-a-half story clapboard cube is the firststory bay window on the front facade. There is also a two-story bay on the southern facade. The building has a quartzite foundation, and the open firststory porch is supported by pillars.

Frank L. and Lillian Jones were the first to live here. He was with the Jones Hardware Store.

79. 826 South First Avenue Built: 1913

Finished in clapboards with cornerboards, this two-and-a-half story cottage has a pyramidal roof with hipped dormers. The dwelling rests on a quartzite foundation, and a one-story porch extends across the first story of the front facade. This porch is supported by pillars and is surmounted by a balustrade.

Tore Teigen, a lawyer at the Minnehaha building, and his wife, Lulu, were the first to live here.

80. 828 South First Avenue Built: 1913

Like its neighbor at 826 South First Avenue, this residence is a two-and-a-half story clapboarded cube with pyramidal roof, hipped dormer, and quartzite foundation; however, this building has an enclosed front porch and does not feature a balustrade on the porch roof.

Although tax assessment records indicate that this building was constructed in 1913, the city directory shows that in 1911, Randy Teigen, widow of Sevjorn, lived here and Regina Teigen, a teacher and later supervisor of art at the public schools, boarded here.

Built: 1914

This one-and-a-half story cottage has a splayed roofline and a prominent hipped dormer. Attractive features of this building include the brackets inside the main gable and under a projecting window, exposed rafters, and a quartzite foundation. The front porch has been enclosed, and the building now features aluminum siding.

Although tax assessment records indicate this building was constructed in 1914, city directories list James Cooley, a policeman, and his wife, Julia, living here from 1912 until 1928.

82. 831 South First Avenue

Built: 1922 Builder: Peter Lynum

Basically a two-story cube with pyramidal roof and central chimney, this house is made more distinctive by its combination of a brick first story and clapboard second story. A wrap-around porch with enclosed sunroom adds to the character of this building, as does the use of diamond-paned windows.

Built by Peter Lynum, a contractor who constructed several hundred homes in Sioux Falls before his death in 1925, this home is still occupied by his daughter. Behind the house is his workshop, a rectangular pen with shed and garage additions. Lynum worked out of this building and made windows for the houses he constructed.

83. 911 South First Avenue Built: 1932

Georgian Revival is the derivation of this simple, two-story house. This dwelling is of brick construction and features large 8/8 windows, and a central entrance with fluted pilasters and a cornice.

This home was built for Samuel and Linda Haggar of K. A. Haggar and Brothers, grocers.

84. 912 South First Avenue Built: 1916

Two-and-a-half stories in height, this gable-fronted dwelling has a quartzite foundation and is finished in clapboard with fishscale shingles lining the gable ends. An open one-story porch extends across the front facade and is supported by pillars and has dentils at the roofline. A simple semi-circular arched window is located at the peak of the main gable.

Henry Donnelly, clerk at the Queen City Cigar Store, was the first resident of this dwelling.

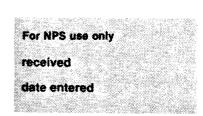

85. 914 South First Avenue Built: 1916

This building is virtually the same as its neighbor at 912 South First Avenue, but this dwelling has a molded concrete foundation, the front porch has been screened, and the second-story windows have shutters.

Jens Anderson and his wife, Maren, were this building's earliest residents. He is not listed as having an occupation.

86. 916 South First Avenue Built: 1915

Resting on a quartzite foundation, this one-and-a-half story clapboard cottage has a prominent gabled dormer. The gabled section is lined with fishscale shingles and features a semicircular arch window. In front of the gable there is a small, balustraded balcony. The gable extends over the first-story porch, and this porch has pillars and dentils.

Knudt and Anna Husebow were the first to live here, and he was a carpenter.

87. 918 South First Avenue Built: 1917

Two-and-a-half stories in height, this building has a quartzite foundation and is finished in clapboard. Shingles line the interiors of the main and porch gables, and brackets also decorate these gables.

Lars and Alida C. Johnson were the earliest residents of this house. He was a carpenter and in 1926 built another small house behind this building. The Johnsons lived in the cottage and rented out the larger house for 20 years.

918¹₂ South First Avenue Built: 1926

This one-and-a-half story gabled cottage is finished in clapboard.

88. 930 South First Avenue Built: 1915

Finished in clapboard, this two-and-a-half story building has a molded concrete foundation and a pyramidal roof with shed dormer. An unusual feature is the two-story porch which extends across the southern facade. The porch fits into the pitch of the pyramidal roof, and the open first story contains the main entrance.

George R. and Ruth Barnett lived here. He was a solicitor at Knowles, Dwight, and Toohey, fire insurance.

89. 1002 South First Avenue Built: 1900

Irregular massing and the use of fishscale and staggered butt shingles in the gables give this two-and-a-half story building an animated appearance. Resting on a quartzite foundation, this building is finished in clapboard. Numerous gables and different roof pitches contribute to the character of this dwelling.

Peter C. Ellingson, a partner in Ellingson Brothers, bicycle and novelty repair shop, lived in this house from its construction until the 1920s, and his wife, Hannah, lived here until 1954.

90. 1005 South First Avenue Built: 1903

A one-and-a-half story building, this cottage features a prominent front gable and has gambrel dormers on the side facades. The simple structure is finished in clapboard and has an enclosed front porch.

F. I. and M. Russell were the earliest owners of this house, and in 1912 William and Carmen Shephard lived here. He was a traveling agent.

91. 1008 South First Avenue Built: 1885

This two-story residence is finished in shingles and has irregular massing. The front facade features a large gabled dormer and an enclosed one-story porch. The southern facade has a small gable-within-a-gable, and a one-story addition extends to the rear.

In 1885 and 1886, the owner of this property was J. M. Neil, an artist, and by 1890 Lyman T. Dunning of Dunning and Chase, drugs, paints, oils and glass, owned this property but did not live here. In c. 1900 David and Amelia Jacobson moved to this house along with Carrie Jacobson, a dressmaker. David was a clerk at Fantle Brothers department store. In 1941 this building was converted to a duplex.

92. 1009 South First Avenue Built: 1903

This one-and-a-half story gabled cottage rests on a quartzite foundation and is finished in clapboard. The gable extends over a first-story open porch, and the living room window has a leaded glass transom.

Until c. 1909, F. I. and M. Russell were the owners of this house. The Russells originally owned all of the houses on the west side of the 1000 block of South First Avenue. All of these houses were constructed in 1903, and all are variations on the same one-and-a-half story gabled cottage pattern. In 1910, Paul Hanson, a traveling agent for the Sandwich Manufacturing Company, and his wife, Mary, moved here.

93. 1018-1020 South First Avenue Built: 1916

This two-story duplex sits on a molded concrete foundation and is finished in clapboard. The building has a hipped roof, and an attractive feature of this building is the open one-story proch which extends across the front facade and which has a pediment over the two front entrances.

The manager of the Queen City Cigar Store, William L. Swenson, wife, Mary, and Odean Hareid, deputy clerk of courts, and wife, Ella, were the first residents of this duplex.

94. 1019 South First Avenue Built: 1903

This one-and-a-half story cottage has a quartzite foundation and clapboard finish. The gable extends over an open first-story porch which features tapered pillar supports. Leaded transoms highlight the first-story windows, and the side facades feature gabled dormers.

The earliest owners of this house were F. I. and M. Russell. In c. 1907, William A. Cornell, the city auditor, and wife, Bertha, moved here.

95. 1021 South First Avenue Built: 1903

Finished in clapboard, this gabled one-and-a-half story cottage has an enclosed front porch. Two regular windows and two lancet-like windows are located in the front gable. Side facades feature gabled dormers which overhang the first story and are supported by brackets.

F. I. and M. Russell owned this property until c. 1907, when Albert F. and Nora E. Pitcher purchased the house. Albert Pitcher was an agent with the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, and they lived here until 1915 when they moved to 1113 South Second Avenue.

96. 1100 South First Avenue Built: 1922

Elements of the Prairie School can be seen in this two-story dwelling. Stretchers surround the windows and central front entrance, and the building is executed in running bond brick. The pyramidal front entrance hood is supported by brackets and creates a clear delineation between first and second stories. A two-story wing extends to the south, and the main building is topped with a pyramidal roof with broad eaves.

This residence was home to William R. and Clara Larson. He was president of the W. R. Larson Construction Company.

97. 1112 South First Avenue Built: 1922

As with the dwelling to the north, this two-story cube with splayed pyramidal roof features some Prairie School elements. The first story is finished in running bond brushed brick, and stretchers surround the windows. A one-story brick sunroom extends from the front, and a two-story ell is to the south. The second story is finished in stucco.

Martin and Elizabeth Wirsing were the first to live here. He served as district superintendent for the Standard Oil Company.

98. 1114 South First Avenue Built: 1900

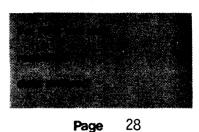

Clapboard and shingles finish this two-story gabled house. The gable and all original first and second story windows are decorated with dentils. Side facades have gabled dormers and projecting bays. The one-story entranceway is not original.

V. L. Polk was the first owner of this house, but he is not listed as living in Sioux Falls. In c. 1903, Mark D. and Eva Scott moved to this house. He was publisher of the Sioux Falls Journal and they lived here until the 1930s. During the 1950s the building was converted to a duplex, and then in the late 1970s, the building was changed back to a single family residence.

99. 1215 South First Avenue Built: 1936

Tudor Revival is the derivation of this two-and-a-half story house. The building is finished in textured stucco and features pseudo half-timbering at the gables. An arched and recessed entranceway and a first-story bay window add to the character of this building.

This house was built for Claude W. and Pearl Thompson. Thompson was co-owner of the Thompson-Knott Motor Company, which was the first Dodge distributor and later became the local Ford dealer. The Thompsons previously had lived next door at 114 East 21st Street.

100. 1220 South First Avenue Built: 1913

Although this two-and-a-half story cube with pyramidal roof has been finished in asbestos siding, it still retains a number of its original decorative features. The first-story windows have leaded transoms, and a one-story porch across the front facade is supported by Doric columns and decorative trim at its roofline. The front gabled dormer window features multi-paned windows, and its pediment is supported by brackets and is decorated with a sunburst carving. A one-story wing extends to the rear of the building.

While tax assessment records indicate that this building was constructed in 1913, city directories list Oliver S. and Ruth W. Pendar as living here from 1907 until 1919. Oliver Pendar was a clerk at the U.S. Court Federal Building.

101. 1100 South Second Avenue Built: 1919

A combination of brick, stucco and wood enliven this one-and-a-half story bungalow. The foundation and porch base are executed in running bond brick, and stucco finishes the remainder of the building. Stick ornamentation ornaments the gable ends. On the front facade there is a large shed gable. A one-story pent roofed gable extends to the south, and the front porch is enclosed.

Soren J. Biscard, a contractor, lived here with his wife, Belle. Louis and May Jacobs also lived here, and he was a cashier at the Commercial and Savings Bank.

102. 1109 South Second Avenue Built: 1916

Roger C. and Pearl Mills were the first to live here. He was vice president and superintendent of Sioux Falls Traction System.

103. 1111 South Second Avenue Built: 1915

A two-and-a-half story cube in form, the first story of this building is finished in clapboard and the second in shingle. The pyramidal roof features a hipped dormer and pillars with modified Doric capitals divide the enclosed porch.

The president of Brown Hardware Company, Lester R. Brown and his wife, Edna, were the first to live here.

104. 1112 South Second Avenue Built: 1919

Finished in stucco, this one-and-a-half story bungalow has a brick foundation. The front facade has an enclosed porch with a gabled and bracketed roof, and brackets ornament the side gables and the shed dormer.

Raymond P. and Jerushia R. Hanson were the first to live here. He was a dentist.

105. 1113 South Second Avenue Built: 1915

This one-and-a-half story bungalow has a molded concrete foundation and clapboard finish. The shed dormers and side gables of the main building feature large brackets. This building also has an enclosed front porch.

Nora E. and Albert F. Pilcher were the first residents of this bungalow. He was an agent with the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway. They moved here from 1201 South First Avenue.

106. 1117 South Second Avenue Built: 1888

Finished in stucco, this building has irregular massing and several gables. The front entrance has a bracketed hood, and there is a gable-roofed side entrance.

Malcolm Jameson of Jameson Brothers and Green, real estate, lived here until c. 1894 when Christian G. Leyse purchased the house. In 1894 Leyse was a cashier for the Central Banking and Trust Company, and by 1900 he was secretary of the Co-Operative Savings and Loan Association. In 1940 his widow, Genett Leyse, converted the house the apartments. They are still apartments today.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The All Saints Historic District is significant in the areas of architecture, education, social/humanitarian activities and local business history. Located in the District are the All Saints School and Longfellow School, two well-designed educational facilities which have played important roles in the history of the city. Mr. and Mrs. William H. Lyon, active civic leaders and local philanthropists, donated land for the District's Lyon Park, and made this neighborhood their home. Numerous local businessmen also moved to this neighborhood in the early twentieth century, as did five architects/builders who played key roles in shaping the face of this city. This District is most significant, however, for its fine concentration of attractive middle-class homes characteristic of the early twentieth century.

In 1870, Artemus Gale, a Sioux Falls pioneer and land speculator, staked a claim of 400 acres, including the land on which the All Saints District is located. Two events precipitated the nineteenth century development of this area--the building of the railroad and the establishment of the All Saints School. In 1878, the first railroad came to Sioux Falls; the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railway was laid from Valley Springs to Sioux Falls, and a year later the route was extended to Salem, South Dakota. This 1879 section traverses the District. In 1884, the All Saints School was established. Founded under the guidance of the Right Reverend William Hobart Hare, the first Episcopal Bishop of the Dakota Territory, All Saints was a girls' boarding school. Bishop Hare proposed the establishment of this school for daughters of missionaries and Sioux Falls residents in April of 1884. Within a few days, local citizens had chosen and secured the site and raised the necessary money. Construction began in the summer of 1884, and by September of 1885, the school was completed and opened for classes. This prominent landmark made the surrounding neighborhood an attractive residential area for the city. All Saints School continues to serve the community as a private co-educational day school for pre-school through grade 6, and thus for close to a century has been an important educational institution for the city.

With railroad linkage to the east and west and the establishment of such fine facilities as the school, Sioux Falls truly began to develop. From an 1873 population of 593, Sioux Falls grew to 2,164 in 1880, and to 10,177 in 1890, and residential development began to occur in the District. The All Saints neighborhood experienced its greatest growth, however, after the turn of the century. Between 1900 and 1919 when the population of Sioux Falls grew by almost 250 percent, 68 percent of the existing buildings were constructed. While the majority of the residences from this period are more modest in style, nonetheless, some architecturally distinctive residences were built by wealthier residents. For the most part, however, homes in the District are fairly modest in size and plan. Bungalows, cube houses, and one-and-a-half story gabled cottages predominate, and are characterized by leaded windows, decorative shingling and brackets, and attractive interior woodwork. These simple residences are significant as fine examples of middle class homes of the early twentieth century. They display the fine craftsmanship and attention to architectural detail that was characteristic of this period.

OMB No. 1024-0018

Exp. 10-31-84

Most of the residents of the dwellings of this period were of the middle class--clerks, traveling agents, and small business owners and employees, with a few doctors, lawyers, and other professionals represented. These citizens played an important role in the development of Sioux Falls. Five residents of the District played an extremely significant role in shaping the face of Sioux Falls, for this neighborhood was home to six important architects and builders. Architect Wallace Dow, who designed numerous civic and commercial buildings in Sioux Falls and throughout the state. designed and built two homes in the District. Architect Robert Perkins, who also designed numerous buildings in this region, also had his home in the All Saints District. His partner in the architectural firm of Perkins and McWayne, John McWayne, lived in this District for several decades. Builder Henry Carlson constructed several homes in this area and lived in one of those homes until his death. Henry Carlson founded the firm of Henry Carlson Company, which is still active today. Contractor Oscar Carlson, who built hundreds of homes in Sioux Falls from c. 1911 until the 1970s, resided for a while in this neighborhood, as did contractor Peter Lynum. Lynum built several hundred homes before his death in the 1920s, including his own home in the District.

In response to the tremendous growth in this neighborhood in the first two decades of the twentieth century, the Longfellow School was designed by the firm of Perkins and McWayne, and was built in 1916. After close to seventy years of use, this Tudor- and Mediterranean-inspired building is still in use as a public school. In 1928, the Lyon family donated property adjacent to their house for use as a park. This park is an attractive landmark in the neighborhood, and is a symbolic reminder of the many civic and philanthropic activities of William and Winona Axtell Lyon. The Lyons donated to the city a building for an early public library, property for Winona Park, Axtell Park, Lyon Playground and also were responsible in part for Lyon Lodge and Palisades Park.

The All Saints Historic District is an attractive residential district characteristic of the early twentieth century. Home to some important Sioux Falls residents, this District is also significant as a tangible reminder of Sioux Falls' period of greatest early growth and development.

All Saints Historic District (Update) Sioux Falls, South Dakota

Updated Property List for Contributing/Non-contributing Status

The 1982 National Register nomination for the All Saints Historic District in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, included two hundred and fifteen (215) contributing properties with a period of significance from 1880 to 1940, and a total of 243 properties. In keeping with the format for preparing nominations at the time, the resources within the district boundaries were labeled as Landmark, Contributing, Fabric, and Intrusion. As these are terms that are no longer appropriate and lend themselves to confusion, the resources were re-evaluated to assess contributing and non-contributing status. This amendment also denotes the presence of contributing and non-contributing ancillary buildings such as detached garages or other outbuildings which was not included in the original nomination.

In re-evaluating the district, it has been determined that the period of significance should remain as originally nominated (1875 to 1940) which best represents the overall character and setting of the neighborhood. The district is significant for its architectural merit as well as its contribution to the residential development of Sioux Falls.

The original boundaries for the district remain unchanged and the properties located within the established boundaries remain relatively unaltered and still exhibit a high degree of architectural and historic integrity. The overall setting is also intact and all landscaping, including Lyons Park, retains its historic appearance.

The initial evaluations of the resources were based on their condition at the time of listing in 1982. Since that time most of the buildings have remained intact with little or no alterations that would detract from the circa 1982 appearance. For this reason, most of the properties previously denoted as Landmark and Contributing were updated to contributing designations while those previously deemed Intrusion (those that post-dated 1945) were changed to non-contributing status. The properties that required additional assessment were those listed as Fabric, which referred to resources that were intact but not particularly distinctive examples of the period, and those that were distinctive but had been altered considerably. All Fabric properties were re-evaluated for either contributing or non-contributing status based on current standards for eligibility.

This update enumerates a total of three hundred and seventy-four (374) contributing resources and forty-eight (48) non-contributing resources located within the district. The contributing resources include two hundred fourteen (214) primary residential dwelling buildings, one hundred fifty-nine residential garages or outbuildings (159), and one (1) public park. Twenty-seven (27) of the noncontributing resources are primary residential dwelling buildings, and the remainder are noncontributing outbuildings. The original count of the 1982 nomination did not include the garages and outbuildings. In addition, one contributing primary residence, 746 South Phillips Avenue, has been moved out of the district subsequent to the original nomination of the historic district.

During the re-evaluation process the period of significance was also considered for possible adjustment to allow for contributing designations for resources built up to 1952. Although a few houses in the district now meet the established fifty-year age criterion for consideration of eligibility, an overwhelming percentage (94%) of the resources contained therein pre-date 1945. Approximately 8 percent were constructed before 1900, roughly 18 percent were built between 1900 and 1909, 50 percent date between 1910 and 1919, and 18 percent of the dwellings were built between 1920 and 1945. Since only 5 percent of the houses date after 1945, the overall character of the neighborhood is representative of an older period and the later houses are not indicative of the defining character of the neighborhood which is composed primarily of Victorian and Revival style houses. Given that the architecture and setting is more typical of early twentieth-century building patterns and residential planning and the fact that the original nomination stipulates that anything dating after 1945 is ineligible, the period of significance should therefore remain as stated in the 1984 document. For this reason, all buildings that post-date 1940 were revised with a non-contributing designation.

The following inventory is based on the 2001 review and reassessment of the all Saints Historic District. Resources are listed by address, historic name (where known), date of construction, and designation (contributing or non-contributing) for primary and secondary buildings. No additional resources were considered for inclusion.
