south exterior wall of the house became the interior wall of the porch. A door where ice was formerly delivered to the kitchen of the house has been closed off. The bathroom on the second floor is one step above the level of the hallway. There is a pulldown stairway to the attic and grates in the attic floor provide ventilation for the rooms below via the ridge dormers. There is a small furnace room instead of a full basement.

This house is architecturally significant because it is one of a group of stone masonry houses built by Arnold F. Meyer & Company, Inc. according to the construction methods of Ernest Flagg.
