Could you let the Keeper now the Hayesville Independent School (NRIS #90001195) is no longer standing and should be delisted. Bill Sherman let me know it was torn down in 2010. I've attached a USA Today article saying how the building is to be torn down in 2010. The Iowa One Room Schools blog <http://schoolhouses.blogspot.com/2011/09/lancaster-school-landcaster.html> states in it's September, 2011 article how the desks were used in the Lancaster School:

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 2011

Lancaster School, Lancaster

The little town of Lancaster really doesn't exist any more as a town. This school was in the town square when it was built in 1881. The school operated until closing on May 13, 1964, and was later used as a voting station. It was open for tours on the day we visited. For restoration, desks and blackboards were brought in from Hayesville School (which was similar) before it was torn down in 2010.

Also attached are images from our GIS showing Hayesville School with the 2009 aerial and the USGS map. In the image below from GoogleMaps you can see the building is now gone from the SW corner of Main and Fritz.

RE: Delisting of the razed Haysville Independent School, SW corner of Main and Fritz, Haysville, Keokuk County

Dear Mayor Gammack,

It has come to the attention of the State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) that the above referenced property was demolished in 2010. Is the city the current owner of this property? Our office is trying to provide notification to owners of properties that need to be delisted from the National Register of Historic Places. However, the National Park Service has informed us that we must notify the current owner of the delisting.

If you have questions, Beth Foster Hill can be contacted at beth.foster@iowa.gov.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Foster Hill

Sited on a level lot adjacent to a residential area and farmland in a village of 93 persons, the Hayesville School is a two-story, rectangular-shaped, wood frame building sheathed in white painted clapboards that rests on foundations of locally quarried stone and is capped with a hipped roof of medium pitch. Consisting of two large rooms, the edifice is essentially a greatly enlarged version of the basic one-room school house. Constructed in 1897 by local builder John Herman, the school, while best described as vernacular, exhibits overtones of the Greek Revival in its shouldered architrave trim around windows and doors, cornerboards, plain frieze under the roofline, and the pediment that caps the projecting bay/bell tower. In front of the building is a hand pump that provided water for the school. Except for the removal of an exterior rear stair, the exterior of the schools appears to have undergone little alteration. In the early 1950's and 1960's, the interior was renovated, but most of the original woodwork and interior staircase were retained. Adjacent to the school and pump are a fire station and office of recent construction; these are considered intrusions and are not a part of this nomination. Currently the school is vacant, being used for picnics and other community affairs.

Section number 8 Page 1

The Hayesville Schoolhouse is significant under National Register criterion C as a well-preserved example of what has come to be a relatively rare extant school type--the two-story, wood frame schoolhouse. In his 1984 publication, AMERICA'S COUNTRY SCHOOLS, Andrew Gulliford states that wood frame "two-story schools were extremely rare west of the Mississippi River. #1 in the case of Keokuk County, where the Hayesville School is located, however, the rarity of the type appears to relate more to the fragility of the materials utilized than the number constructed. Between 1870 and 1900, at least four and very likely more of these schoolhouses were constructed in the county, but presently the Hayesville and Lancaster schools are the only examples that have not been demolished or lost their integrity. The Hayesville School is similar to the others not only in terms of form and materials but it like them exhibits the pedimented front facade, corner boards, plain friezes under the roofline, and architrave trim around windows and doors often associated with the Greek Revival style. It differs from the others in its class by being somewhat larger, and is the only one capped with a hipped rather than gabled roof. The Hayesville School can best be described as vernacular because its design seems to be based more on local rules of thumb of how schools were supposed to look than stylistic considerations and the ready availability of Greek Revival derived building elements from the standard millwork catalogs of the day.

The property is also significant under Criterion A because of the building's association with a bygone era of primary education characterized by small one- and two-room schools. The period of significance began with the school building's construction in 1897 and had ended by about 1921 with the combined effects of declining school enrollment exacerbated by the voting out of its status as a consolidated district, which had heretofore enlisted pupils from the surrounding countryside. This two-room school, in short, suggests a time when, responding to the bulge in Hayesville enrollment, this 1897 two-story building replaced the town's original one-room school situated one block east. Its construction marked an era when the locality attained its greatest number of residents and the numerous children of rural families prompted expanded school facilities, which initially included grades 9 and 10 up to 1913. The school reached its peak enrollment of 77 in 1906 and then declined to 38-41 during the next decade and a half before slipping gradually to the point when, during its last year in 1966, the school contained 25 pupils.

HAYESVILLE TWO-ROOM SCHOOL CLOSED

(Headlines in Ottumwa Courier, Ottumwa, Iowa by Mrs. Frank Jaegar, Courier Correspondent dated May 28, 1966).

The Hayesville tow-room rural school closed last week with the customary picnic. School had been held here since 1897.

After July 1, 1966 the Hayesville Independent District will become part of the new Sigourney community School District. The Hayesville school board has sold the school, all contents and the grounds to the town of Hayesville to use as residents see fit. The school and an acre of land provide an ideal place for community events.

Two of the 25 pupils enrolled this year were graduated from the eighth grade. They were Gary Henson and Marvin Shultz. Teachers were Mrs. Eula McKenzie Utterback, a teacher for 15 years and Mrs. Fern Priest martin, a teacher for 9 years.

The two-story building replaced the town's original one room school which was located one block east. A school register from 1906 reveals a sharp contrast in community health since that date. In the teacher's handwriting we read: "School closed for two weeks because of contagious diseases in the neighborhood". Then after the name of a six year old pupil, Hazel McCullough, is written: "little Hazel will not be back to school. She died Saturday night, October 13." The girl was the sister of A. C. McCullough, who states death was caused by scarlet fever.

There have been marked changes in both attendance and curriculum. The peak for both was in the early 1900's when the ninth and tenth grades were taught and some classes were held outside school in the Spiritualist Hall. After 1931 when state accreditation ceased for the two higher grades they were dropped. The last principal for the 10-grade school was the late A. J. Bryant. The low in attendance probably was in 1940-41, when Mrs. Mae Gilliland served the school alone.

Hayesville was a consolidated district for several years, but the system proved unpopular and in 1921 consolidation was voted out. Mrs. Roger Henson, the former Ila Middleton, of Hayesville, relates that when coal stoves were in use and some pupils walked two miles carrying a lunch pail, it took a long time to thaw out cold hands. The school has never served hot lunches. Mrs. Henson, who taught in 1932-48 recalls that while normal training was taught in Sigourney High School, class members came each year to Hayesville for practice teaching. Her school day started with all reciting in unison this prayer: "Our Father, we thank Thee for the night and for the morning light; for food and rest and tender care and all that makes the world so fair. Help us to do the things we should; to be to others kind and good; in all we do and all we say make us more loving day by day." This was followed by the health quiz so popular then. Pupils raised hands as affirmative answers to questions such as "Have you brushed your teeth this morning--How many have clean hands, and how many went to bed last night by 8:00?"

During World War II the School collected a sizable pile of steel scrap for the war effort. Pupils pulled their little wagons over town to collect the scrap residents had placed in their yards.

Arbor Day was always observed with a planting on the grounds while the late Lucia Richardson read an appropriate poem. Highlight of the year was the Christmas program. An unforgettable Christmas was the year Santa Claus with Mrs. Santa in their sleigh drove around the schoolhouse several times with bells jingling before he came in and unloaded his pack.
