In 1783, thirteen years before Tennessee became a state, the first permanent white settlers were attracted to the Dandridge area by the French Broad River and a good spring (located near the Hynds House). Two years later, the Hopewell Presbyterian Church was organized. By 1792, the settlementhad grown to such an extent that Governor William Blount designated the new county of Jefferson in the Territory South of the Ohio River. Francis Dean, a wealthy landowner, gave 50 acres for Dandridge which became the county seat in 1793. It bears the distinction of being the only town in the United States named for Martha Dandridge Washington.

Dandridge became a regular stop for boats carrying provisions up and down the French Broad River. It was also a major stage stop on the road between Abingdon, Virginia, and Knoxville, Tennessee, as well as a road traveled by stock traders operating between Tennessee and North Carolina. As a result, it had an abundance of early taverns, three of which are still standing--the Roper Tavern, Shepard's Inn, and the Hickman House. According to Eastin Morris' Tennessee Gazetteer, published in 1834, Dandridge had by that time 300 inhabitants, including "three lawyers, three doctors, two divines, one academy, two schools, four stores, two taverns, four blacksmiths, one bricklayer, two carpenters, three cabinetmakers, one painter, one hatter, two tailors, two shoemakers, one saddler, two tanners, one wagonmaker, and one wheelwright." The list illustrates that the town had developed sufficiently to support a variety of artisans as well as the usual and necessary professions. The period through the 1850's continued to be prosperous because during that decade several banks were established and the first newspaper was published. After the Civil War, however, trade shifted to towns and cities located on the railroads and Dandridge began to decline.

Little is known about the earliest structures in Dandridge, although it is probably a safe assumption that they were log. When the first frame or brick buildings were built is also unknown. The majority of nineteenth century structures remaining in the proposed district predate the Civil War and are in simple classical revival styles. Although there is an occasional evidence of "gingerbread," later nineteenth century structures are modest in scale and almost devoid of any ornament. There remains an obvious correlation between the architecture of Dandridge and the economic and commercial growth and decline of the town.
