Miantonomi Memorial Park comprises 32 acres around Miantomoni Hill north of Newport.

The tall memorial tower on the top of the Hill was dedicated in 1929 to the fifty six men of Newport who died in the service of their country or in the service of an ally in World War I. Built of rough field stone after designs by William Mitchell Kendall then senior partner in the New York firm of McKim, Mead and White, it is based upon the numerous circular watchtowers or beacons of fieldstone which are to be found along the coasts of the Old World. Around the base of Newport's tower, however, is an arcaded terrace inspired by Newport's Old Stone Mill, called America's most controversial structure. This tower is also crowned with a lantern reminiscent of the Pharos, the lighthouse at Alexandria, Egypt.

The tower rises 78 feet six inches above the 150-foot hill. The height to the parapet of the first terrace is 16 feet, nine inches, and the height to the parapet of the second terrace, 58 feet, nine inches. A circular staircase rises almost to this level. From this point, a short, narrow stairway gives access to the terrace, which provides a splendid view of countryside and ocean.

The cost of the tower was $37,600. In addition, the commission has been responsible for the landscaping, and the construction of boundary walls and picnic facilities.

After the war, the entire area about Miantonomi Hill reverted to farm land and remained as such until 1921. During this time at least two observation towers were built here, one having blown down.

In 1921 the City of Newport purchased the site for a park. The development and operation of which were entrusted to the Miantonomi Memorial Park Commission. In 1923 a bronze placque was installed dedicating the park as a memorial to the "Great War" and in 1929 the present memorial tower was dedicated.

Thus the site has historic importance from the Colonial, Revolutionary War, and World War I periods.

habitants had been erected on Tomony Hill.

President James Monroe, on an inspection tour of military and naval installations, visited Miantonomi Hill in 1817.

The memorial park and the tower, dedicated in 1929, had among official attendants, Rear Adm. William S. Sims, USN; Gen. James Parker, USA (ret), Congressional Medal of Honor winner, and Mrs. Maude Howe Elliott (Pulitzer Prize winner) and daughter of Julia Ward Howe. In August of 1927 Admiral Sims and Gen. John Pershing, USA, visited the hill and it was here the famous World War I were photographed together for the first time.
