The building is located on lot 8, block 33, in the former town of Florence, now part of Omaha. It was erected in 1856 as a modest two story brick building with a low pitched hip roof. The heavy cornices and the treatment of the wall openings place the structure within the tradition of Greek Revival commercial architecture, even through the building is almost devoid of ornamentation. Many years ago, the original double doors of the principal facade (east) entrance were replaced by a single door, and the numerous lights and glazing bars of each window were replaced by large panes of glass. Otherwise, very few exterior alterations have been made over the years. Although the interior appears to have been remodeled extensively around the turn of the century, the original bank vault remains intact. \ Shipped by steamboat from western Pennsylvania in 1856, this vault consists of interwoven strips of quarter-inch sheet steel. The vault is ventilated by concealed air shafts and enclosed within three foot thick masonry walls.

Within the past five years, the building has been acquired and partially restored by the Florence Historical Foundation under the leadership of J. M. Hart, Jr., President of Omaha's North Side Bank. The Foundation has removed the many layers of exterior paint through sandblasting, repointed and waterproofed the walls, and repaired and repainted the wood trim. The large "Bank of Florence" sign across the facade has also been restored recently and is said to be original to the structure. The building is now occasionally opened to the public as a museum. Late nineteenth céntury bank furnishings, including teller's cages, were recently removed from an old bank near David Citý, Nebraska, and installed inside the Florence bank, and installed inside the florence bank at the turn of the century. The bank's history is summarized on an official Nebraska Historical Marker located just south of the building. EE INSTRUCTION

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

Now a section of northeastern Omaha, the former town of Florence figures prominently in the early history of Nebraska, created as a territory in 1854. Florence was platted in 1854 on the site of Winter Quarters, which had been established by the Mormons in 1846 as their principal encampment between Nauvoo and Salt Lake City during their epic westward migration. Briefly, during the 1850's, Florence stood as one of Nebraska's leading Missouri River steamboat ports. The Bank of Florence is the most important and least altered of the few extant early buildings in Florence. It is also one of the oldest commercial buildings in Nebraska and is perhaps the oldest building in Omaha, Nebraska's largest city.

The Bank of Florence was chartered by Nebraska's territorial legislature on January 18, 1856, and the building was erected the following summer at a cost of $4500 by builder Levi Harsh for the financial firm of Cook, Sargent & Parker of Davenport, Iowa. The bank soon played an important role in the development of the Florence area. | Frontier banking practices were lax, and along with other Nebraska banks of the 1850's the Bank of Florence issued quantities of unsecured "wild cat" currency and financed land speculation. Much of this money still exists in museums and private collections. Weakened by the Panic of 1857, the bank failed in 1859. (Only one Nebraska bank survived the Panic.) Various businesses continued to use the bank building prior to the organization of the second Bank of Florence, which occupied the structure from 1904 to 1939. Omaha's present North Side Bank, located south of the Florence area, traces its origin to both the first Bank of Florence and the second Bank of Florence.
