DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

A sketch of the fort done in 1853 revealed a log stockade containing several buildings with several log buildings in the vicinity of the fort.

Construction of the fort in its final form began in earnest in 1857, with adobe bricks replacing the original logs. By 1860 the root cellar was completed as was a well house; then the gates on the north and south sides of the fort were hung.

In the 1880s the construction of a highway into Stevensville destroyed the north wall and gate, and in 1889 a severe windstorm ripped off a roof and further damaged the buildings. In the early 1900s the bastions were removed and in 1912 the unoccupied west barracks were leveled.

Only the east wing of the fort remains today. This includes the previous living quarters, bedroom, office, and library of Major Owen in addition to dormitory rooms. Archeological investigations have exposed the foundations for the fort's walls and bastions.

As funds become available, state park authorities plan to reconstruct the bastions, the walls, the south gate, and the west barracks. A small museum is also planned.

Fort Owen was the site of the first successful farming operation in Montana and probably in the Rocky Mountains. Father Pierre De Smet and six companions came to the area in 1841 and established St. Mary's Mission among the Flathead Indians. They brought along with them oxen, wagons, carts and plows. In the following year, the Jesuits planted a garden near the Mission which produced some vegetables and wheat. In 1846, St. Mary's Mission farm is reported to have produced 7,000 bushels of wheat, between 4,000 and 5,000 bushels of potatoes, and various kinds of vegetables. The stock consisted of 40 head of cattle, horses, and other animals.

This site appears to be Montana's oldest continuously occupied settlement. When Major (non-military title) John Owen arrived in the Bitterroot Valley in 1850, he purchased the grounds and built an adobe trading fort. Trade at the post, mostly with westbound immigrants, was threatened in the mid-1850s by constant harassment from Blackfeet Indians, but flourished again when gold was discovered in the surrounding areas. The town of Stevensville grew around the fort and trading post, but was replaced as a center of commerce in 1865 by Hellgate (now Missoula).

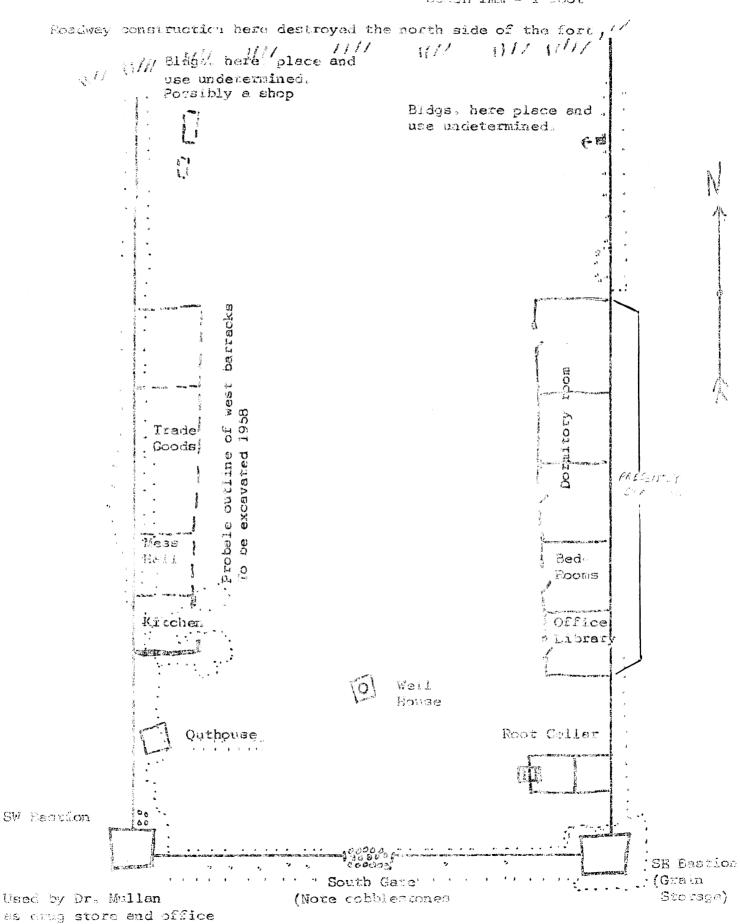

At Fort Owen was the site of the first sawmill, flour mill, cattle herd, irrigation and public school in Montana.

Fort Owen became a state monument in 1956. Measured drawings, photographic coverage and historical and architectural evaluations are recorded in the HISTORIC AMERICAN BUILDINGS SURVEY.

FORT OWEN - A CHRONOLOGY

Carling Malouf and William Smurr Montana State University

Fort Owen had its beginning in 1850 when the Jesuit missionaries at St. Mary's abandoned their project and sold the Mission property to John Owen. Briefly, the sequence of events in the construction and subsequent destruction of the fort was as follows:

1841

St. Mary's Mission was founded by Father Jean DeSmet on a plot of land now located about one-half a mile west of the ruins of Fort This location was a few hundred yards northeast of the present Bitterroot River overflow channel bridge on the road to Stevensville. The original mission was constructed of cottonwood logs and there are no longer any surface remains to identify its location. An old highway built into Stevensville during the 1880's cut through the graveyard which one adjoined the old mission, thus revealing the grounds where the mission once stood. This old highway bed was levelled in 1956 and the remains of the mission probably lie buried beneath some six feet of overburden. Besides the ission there were small flour and saw mills. and a few cabins built nearby. Burnt Creek which flows into the Bitterroot River from the east, was diverted to provide a stream of water for operating the mills, for gardens and for domestic use. This stream still flows through the McKinley Ranch about sixty yards north of the remains of Fort Owen.

1850

The Jesuits decided to abandon St. Mary's Mission, and John Owen purchased the land and improvements for the sum of $250. The Bill of Sale, signed by Father Giorde, was dated November 5, 1850. Fort Owen, thus, became a trading establishment named after its owner. Never did it serve as an official military post.

1852

Preparations began for the construction of the fort in its final form. Work in earnest, however, did not begin until 1857. Major John Oven (that was his unofficial title) first constructed a shall palisaded fort which contained two or three internal buildings. Cabins, as well as the original mission property continued to be used. The fort itself was constructed a few hundred yards east of the mission grounds where the elevation is slightly higher. At least part of the final adobe well of the fort was built alongside the earlier palisades. About eight years were required to complete the structure. Here are some extracts from Owen's Journal relating to the work on the fort:

(Punctuation and caritalization retained as in the original journals).

April 8, 1852. "fencing adobe yard" April 20, 21, 1852 "fixing adobe yard"

These references are to the field where the adobe bricks were made. The yard was located just south of the present road to Stevensville. On the side opposite from the remains of Fort Owen. Indeed, part of the road itself crosses the yard. The adobe blocks were molded in wooden boxes, and then they were sun dried and hauled to the site of the fort. References to the fort construction continue:

April 21, 1852 "Building Hall"
April 25, 1832 "building well and covering shed
Emanuel making adobes."

In this vein many other remarks are entered in the journals. In many cases it is possible to name the individuals who made the adobes, and those who placed them in the walls of the fort.

A sawmill was erected for the purjose of making boards and roof timbers. Later a grist mill was also erected.

During the 1850's there were a few raids by Blackfoot Indians who sought to steal horses from the fort. Besides some property loss and damages a few human lives were lost. Evidently John Oven used the grave/ard at St. mary's for the disposition of the dead.

1857

Work on the fort progressed in earnest beginning this year. Examples of entries are thus:

June 2, 1857 "commenced laying up the foundation."

June 6, 1857 "The foundation about done except leveling."

June 17, 1857 "laying up adobes Lomprey finished foundation for the bouth west lastion which I intend erecting 14 feet square out to out with two wall giving me a ten foot room in the clear."

similar bastion was built shortly afterwards on the southeast corner of the fort. Although John Oven intended similar structures on the northern corners of the fort they were never completed. However, on July 8, 1857, he reported, "working today in digging trench for northern foundation again." The foundation was made by digging a trench about three feet across and about 18 inches deep. Then it was filled with stones and sand. Adobe bricks were then laid on the stone foundations. Tossible the foundation extended slightly above the ground level in order to keep the moisture absorbing adobe bricks from contacting the soil.

This year the root cellar was completed. Ar miggins built a well house, a flag staff was raised, and the gates on the south and north sides of the fort were hung. In earlier days the south side had the main gate. After major Owen left the fort, however, the north gate became the main entranceway. In 1957 a party of archaeologists from montana State University found a metal piece from this south main gate which revealed the manner in which the gate had been hung — a detail which heretofore had been lost in history.

1866

ater from melting snow ran down the slope on the north side of the fort and caused part of the wall to collapse. In September of 1866 the wall was repaired. An ice house with a capacity of 1600 cubic feet was completed. Sawdust from the sawmill provided its insulation. Uncuestionably, major Owen liked his "drinks". Presently, however, scholars do not know the location of this ice house. In fact, it is not even known whether it was outside or inside the fort walls.

1867

This year a pump was installed in the well. Frequent repairs were necessary during subsequent years. The pump which can now be observed in the plaza of the fort was not installed until about 1906.

1072

hajor Owen suffered a mental breakdown and was taken to a hospital in Helena, ontana. In 1877 he was taken to his relatives in cemasulvania where, in 1889, he died. Since he was in debt to h. J. Coortick the projecty restred to his owner hip. Thereafter the buildings were occupied by employees and renters and relatively little effort was made to keep the buildings in repair. Hr. McComaick himself was killed, however, when he was blown off the roof of the west barracks during a violent windstona which came in from the southwest. He had been standing on the roof while employees handed rocks up to hom in an effort to hold down the roof. A strong gust of wind hurled man and roof into the plaza and here the timbers crushed hom to death. This was also in 1889 - the same year that a jor Owen died.

1876

The walls of the fort were repaired in haste this year by local farmers and ranchers who retired here in fear of warring legacree Indians. The column of Indians actually passed within 20 yerds of the fort with Chief Joseph in the lead carrying a white flag. He was followed by warriors, and then came women and children. Some Indians remained briefly at the fort to purchase flour.

190.C

Sometimes after Mr. McConnick was filled the fort property was obtained by six ay brothers who used it as a cattle ranch. Still later the property was leased, at least in part, to hr. Moore and his family who occupied the east barracks. It is primarily for this reason the the east barracks remains standing today for the unoccupied buildings soon deteriorated and fell into decay. Early in the 1900's, possibly before 1906, the bastions and the main front gate were gone. In 1912. The George hay, then a young boy, was directed by his father to level that remained of the roof and walls of the west barracks. Ar. May says that he used a team of horses and logging chains to pull down the remains, and that the refuse was pulled inward, into the plaza. Tests pits here in 1957 revealed old timbers are still beneath the ground here.

1937

One acre of property surrounding Fort Owen was purchased by a small group of historic minded citizens for the purpose of establishing an historic site. Among t is group was Dr. Paul C. Phillips and Dr. Charlie Buck who finally donated the Land to the State of Montana for a State Monument. During the 1930's this same group succeeded in raising enough money to partially restore the east barracks.

1956

Fort Owen was accepted by the State of Montana as a State Mark. It is administrated by the State Marks Division, a part of the Montana Highway Commission. Strong local coordination is given toward the Project by various historical and civic groups in the Bitterroot Valley.

1957

Archaeologists from Nontana State University, under Carling Malouf, and historians under the direction of William Shurr commence studies of Fort Owen. The archaeologists excavated the exterior foundations of the fort to determine its extent and location. Such excavation are very necessary before actual reconstruction can commence. In 1958 similar work will be conducted to ascertain interior features, particularly room outlines and outbuildings. Hundreds of specimens in the 1957 excavations are being prepar d for display in a future museum in the fort.

Success of the program will depend entirely on the response of the montena State Legislature, and on the ability of local drives to obtain adequate funds for the restoration of Fort Owen. Fort Owen, it must be remembered, is not only an historic site in its own right, but it also includes the grounds of the original St. Mary's mission the first Indian mission in the Northwest.
