CAPSULE HISTORIES OF COMMERCIAL AND INSTITUTIONAL STRUCTURES IN THE
EUREKA HISTORIC DISTRICT

ST. PATRICK'S RECTORY (Old Sister's Convent)

Construction: Approximately 1920-1923, by St. Patrick's Parish.

Architect/Builder: Unknown

Function: Convent for Sisters of the Holy Cross who were teaching at St. Joseph's School. The piano room served as a music room where many Eureka children learned to play piano. Now serves as the rectory, and sometimes a "retreat home" for various Catholic groups throughout the state.

Significance: The structure's role in the functioning of the Catholic community in Tintic. Constructed largely from funds donated by the Fitch family; again, points to their influence and generosity.

Interior is in fine condition, and music room etc. reflects the life style of nuns in a prosperous mining camp.

ST. PATRICK'S CATHOLIC CHURCH

Construction: November-December, 1885, under direction of Reverend Denis Keily.

Architect/Builder: Unknown. Cost about $3,000.00

Function: Catholic Church, and in 1886 a school.

Significance: Oldest "original" standing Catholic Church in Utah and illustrates Tintic's settlement by the Irish. Also, signifies accomplishments of Utah's Catholic missionary Reverend Lawrence Scanlan (later first Bishop).

Remarks: Fr. Scanlan came into Tintic in 1873, at Diamond, Silver City, and Eureka. In 1885 Fr. Denis Keily in Eureka and apparently selected site of present church and school. First services in the church were held on Christmas day 1885 (the building had been completed only the day before).

A school opened in the Church in January 1886, the pews having been designed so as to serve as desks. It apparently closed in October 1886. The St. Joseph School, which existed at the site of the current parking lot (north of the church) began in May 1891 and finished in August 1891. Sisters of the Holy Cross taught classes. It closed in the 1940s and was later torn down.

Original church bell in the possession of Carl Fields.

Owner: Catholic Church--Bishop of the Diocese of Salt Lake City.

"OLD" ST. PATRICK'S RECTORY (rented as family dwelling)

Construction: Ca. 1912 by the St. Patrick's Parish.

Architect/Contractor: Walter J. Cooper, architect, with aid of William Jones, builder/contractor for the Chief Consolidated Mining Company.

Function: Living quarters for the resident priests. Currently rented as a family dwelling.

Significance: This structure was designed and built by Cooper and Jones, who were in the employ of the Chief Consolidated Mining Company. The Chief was run by the Walter Fitch family, Catholics; and this structure, together with the Sister's home, illustrate the ties between the Fitches and Eureka's Catholic Church. Also illustrated a stability of the church in Eureka.

Remarks: The bungalow-style structure has been somewhat altered on the exterior; evident in the south end of the open porch having been built-in to increase living space.

THE GATELY BUILDING (Vacant), Fulleride Block

Construction: Ca. 1898

Architect/Constructor: Unknown

Function: Served primarily as a saloon and billiards hall, owned by John and James Gately. Apparently, the structure also contained offices in the northwest corner. For example, according to Sanborn maps, in 1898 the building also housed a barber and tailor shop; in 1908, "news" and "office" space. In 1930 Barchay and Featherstone, brokers, occupied an office.

Initially the Fulberide Building.

In 1960s the west end served as Castleton Appliance Company.

Significance: A comparative early structure built of stone, as is evident, and served as one of the most permanent saloons in the city.

Remarks: Initially had a "brick-type" facade, prominent by 1908 wood, as is. Exterior has remained much the same; interior in decay.

Owner: Wayne Cook. - Eureka, Utah

FIRST SECURITY BANK

Construction: 1909, by McCornick & Company, bankers. (W. S. McCormick)

Architect/Contractor: Unknown

Function: The building has always served as a bank--McCornick & Company; Eureka Banking Company (ca. 1917); in 1960s Commercial Service Company; and presently First Security Bank.

Significance: Served as the bank in Tintic's economic center, Eureka. In addition, erected by McCornick and Company of Salt Lake City, prominent mining town bankers.

Remarks: Facade now stucco and front windows have been shortened. The ornate door and hardware are of significance.

McCornick and Company moved their bank, fixtures and all, from Mercur to Eureka in 1898. The George Arthur Rice Bank, in Eureka, had folded in 1897. In 1918 Eureka Banking Company headed by Walter Fitch, President, and John Dern, Vice-President.

Owner: First Security Bank of Utah

STOTT BUILDING (Vacant)

Construction: 1899, by B. N. C. Stott, attorney

Architect/Contractor: Holmes & Watkins of Provo

Function: Commercial building on lower level, offices on upper floor.
Currently vacant.

Significance: Structure designed and built by Holmes & Watkins.
Contained indented entry flanked by two large windows and "four ornate arched windows" (now unfortunately squared-off).
Owned by B. N. C. Stott, prominent local attorney.

Remarks: In 1960s owned by Maria Echevarrieta.

Owner: Glen and Lucille Knotts, c/o Chief Consolidated.

"OLD" TELEPHONE COMPANY OFFICE, BEAUTY PARLOR

Construction: 1903, by Rocky Mountain Telephone.

Architect/Contractor: Unknown

Function: Telephone company office. Now a beauty parlor.

Significance: Commercial structure, basically remaining the same on the exterior.

JUAB COUNTY COURTHOUSE

Construction: 1891, by Juab County. Cost: $5,000.00

Architect/Contractor: Unknown

Function: Juab County Courthouse. Apparently served as City Hall until 1899, when the city built its own structure. Served as a jail for the county, and much of the time also for the city. Still functions as County Courthouse and City jail.

Significance: Early courthouse structure, signifying the local government's recognition of Eureka as the center of the district; also the importance of the district itself.

Remarks: The structure was originally rock with a brick jail; now, entirely stucco. Photographs illustrate that the structure has been enlarged since the jail at the rear was originally smaller. Reports indicate that Adams & Sons, of Eureka, installed a new roof in 1904; and that in 1917 "improvements" (not specified) were made.

In 1927 Sheriff Kaighn acquired new furnishings, linoleum on floors, and new paint and paper.

SILVER CLUB (Occupied)

Construction: Ca. 1918

Architect/Contractor: Unknown

Function: Original function unknown. In 1920s served as U. S. Candy Kitchen, confectionary, owned by Peter Bampal and Peter Demos. Now a bar.

Significance: Period commercial building, constructed of brick. Still intact exterior.

Remarks: Demas and Bampal in business with Alex Zarvos (known locally as Alex Jarvis--who in 1923 purchased a "new Buick six" and made local news). Men also leased at mines, Chief Consolidated for one.

Owners: Robert and Ruth Rowley.

AMOCO OIL STATION

Construction: 1892, by McCrystal & Company. Cost--$3,000.00

Architect/Contractor: Unknown

Function: Initially housed the Tintic Miner, a local newspaper, a meat market, and barber shop. Shortly after became the Tintic Mercantile Company, general merchandise, owned by the McCrystal Investment Company.

In the 1930s or 1940s the Atherly Brothers operated a Hudson-Essex dealership in the building. Currently Amoco Station.

Significance: Built by the McCrystal Investment Company of the Eureka Hill and Gemini Mines. Tintic Merc. served as a "company store" for these mines.

Remarks: An addition was put on at the rear by 1898. Alterations made to accommodate auto dealership and service station. The garage building on the east was built in 1937.

Owner: Leslie and Lloyd Randle.

MARKET BASKET (Vacant)

Construction: 1909-1910, by P. J. Fennell and W. F. Shriver.

Architect/Builder: Unknown

Function: Served as the "Fennell-Shriver Business Block," housing P.J. Fennell's meat market and W. F. Shriver's clothing.

Significance: A period (1910) business block in Eureka's business district. Also, home of Shriver's Clothing, parent store of Shriver's in Provo. In the 1890s F. L. Shriver & Brothers, Clothing, began business. By 1903 it was Harper & Shriver, men's furnishing, and later just W. F. Shriver. Harold and Edwin Shriver became partners with their father in 1925--W. F. Shriver & Sons. A second store was opened at Provo in 1928.

Remarks: The interior partition has been removed; also, the owners of the Market Basket grocery store, the previous occupant, blocked up the large front windows and indented entrance on the west side.

Delos Lombard, large early property holder, owned the land which was purchased by Fennell and Shriver.

Current owner: E. R. Tomkinson

GARRITY BUILDING (Vacant)

Construction: Ca. 1898, presumably by Frank Garrity.

Architect/Contractor: Unknown

Function: West half served as Frank Garrity's Barbershop, and east section as the Utah Power and Light Office. Currently vacant.

Significance: Example of mining town commercial architecture--false-fronted building. Exterior has remained much the same.

Remarks: Juab County Recorder's records show that in 1898 the land was owned by Delos Lombard, a big property holder in Eureka.

Jay Chatterton occupied the barbershop from about the mid-1940s to approximately 1971. Barber furnishings still adorn the interior.

Current Owner: Chief Consolidated Mining Company.

"OLD" L.D.S. WARD CHURCH (two-family dwelling)

Construction: 1902 by the Mormon Church

Architect/Contractor: Very likely Richard C. Watkins was the architect

Function: Eureka L.D.S. Ward Meetinghouse and social hall. New church build in 1976.

Significance: The Gothic-style structure also aids in the documentation of Tintic's religious history. From a small church in Dutchtown (far west end of Main Street on the south side) to this structure, dedicated in 1904 by Apostle Reed Smoot (U.S. Senator). The Gothic-style architecture is unique.

Remarks: The hall (to the east) was added in 1909, under Bishop Peter Borup. Its cost was about $2,000.00 and was designed to be similar in style as the rest of the building. It was constructed for dancing, banquets, and general social purposes.

Unfortunately the Gothic windows on the doors at the bottom of the tower were changed, and similar windows on the tower proper were removed and covered. The hall windows were also squared-off.

Current Owner: John L. Pratt, Eureka resident.

SHEA BUILDING (Used by Eureka City)

Construction: 1899, by Patrick Shea

Architect/Contractor: Unknown

Function: Probably built for utilization as offices on second floor and commercial on main level. Prior to 1910 the commercial space was occupied by Hefferman & Thompson, general store. Upon completion of Elks Block, H-T moved, and the bottom level housed the Crescent Theater. Occupation of second floor remains nebulous.

Significance: The rock, with brick and cast iron facade, structure was built by Pat Shea. This Irishman arrived in Tintic in approximately the 1870s. He was an early businessman, acquiring much property; and earlier had constructed a boarding house and dance hall. The boarding house became the destination of many early Irish immigrants. In 1921 the street behind the structure was named "Shea Avenue."

Remarks: The lower facade is boarded up, but the space is used by Eureka City, the present owner, as a storage shed.

TINTIC GARAGE (Vacant)

Construction: 1915 by O. H. Coleman of Tintic Garage Co.

Architect/Contractor: Unknown

Function: Has always functioned as a garage (repair shop) or service station. Now vacant.

Significance: Aids in illustrating evolution of transportation; advent of automobile. Sheet iron covering a necessity for a frame structure to protect it from fire.

Remarks: In 1927, W. L. Conover altered the structure by removing part of the front of the building to convert it into a service station.

Owners: Mac A. Bigler and B. C. Jameson.

METHODIST CHURCH

Construction: 1891, by the Mission Conference of 1890, and local Methodists.

Architect/Contractor: Unknown

Function: Methodist Church. Still functions as such.

Significance: Important in documenting the religious life of Eureka and Tintic. Gothic style tower houses original bell.

Remarks: Dr. Thomas C. Iliff visited and preached in Eureka on June 18, 1890, and later secured subscriptions toward a new church amounting to $700.00. The Mission Conference of 1890 appropriated $525.00 for Eureka and appointed Reverend W. A. Hunt as pastor. Dr. J. D. Gillilan succeeded Hunt, and the church was completed in the summer of 1891.

In 1903 the church tower was blown over by a storm, but replaced by the insurance company. A log parsonage was built in approximately the 1890s, and torn down in 1976. A new one was constructed in 1918.

The trailer to the west serves as a Sunday school.

Owners: Trustees of the Methodist Church.

RAYMER PHARMACY (Vacant)

Construction: 1926, by Ray Conyers. Cost, ca. $10,000.00.

Architect/Contractor: Unknown

Function: Bottom housed the Raymer Pharmacy and Mrs. Conyer's millinery establishment. Upper portion was the family dwelling.

Significance: Brick, concrete, and stucco building served as commercial structure and family residence.

Owner: Glen and Lucille Knotts

CITY HALL (Occupied)

Construction: 1899, by Eureka City government

Architect/Builder: John J. Pilgrim, a city official, drew the plans and specifications, and was paid $100. Adams & Sons (Eureka) were the contractors, bidding $4,400. The next highest bid was Holmes & Watkins, $4,350.

Function: City Hall--offices for city court, mayor, sheriff, recorder, treasurer, and council chamber. Also city volunteer fire department. Presently serves same function, except courtroom and most of second floor now houses the Tintic Mining Museum sponsored by the Tintic Historical Society.

Significance: Eureka City Hall, still functioning in same capacity. Local architect and contractor.

Remarks: The Committee on City Hall was as follows: H. K. Burton, J. W. Hurd, and W. T. Knight. The property was purchased from Pat Shea for $1200 and is Lot 1-Block 1-Plat A of Eureka Townsite Survey.

Original furniture purchased from B. A. McMillen, Salt Lake City furniture and office supply store.

Concrete black jail added in about 1911.

Owner: Eureka City

MEMORIAL BUILDING (Occupied--for public use)

Construction: 1909, by Eureka City with funding from Carnegie Institute.
Cost $16,000.00

Architect/Contractor: Watkins & Birch, architects.

Function: Carnegie Public Library. Now serves as a building for public use.

Significance: A Carnegie-funded library, constructed with some elements of Colonial Revival architecture; but most significant as having served as a library in a mining town. Perhaps the structure served as an indication of the belief, held by many, as to Eureka's permanence.

Remarks: Renovation occurred in 1947 by Lewis Eric Sandstrom, architect (Provo). Unfortunately this work significantly altered the structure's facade. Windows were relocated, and much of the projecting cornice covered or removed. Much of the facade, with additions, was covered with an architectural porcelain enamel.

The original "Library Committee" was composed of James D. Stack (Mayor), A. L. Mitchell, P. J. Fennell, W. F. Shriver, M. D. Howlett, Gus J. Henriod, Edward Pike, C. E. Zabriskie, and Captain Hugo Deprezin.

Property purchased from Hugh Hefferman for $1,200.00.

Current Owner: Eureka City.

OLD TINTIC PHARMACY, E. G. HANSON

Construction: Ca. 1894

Architect/Contractor: Unknown; probably same as Andrew Drug and Lucille's buildings

Function: Sanborn maps for 1898 indicate the structure was a grocery store; but by 1899 E. G. Hanson was in business. Currently vacant.

Significance: Like Lucilles and Andrew Drugs, structure of rock and brick, seemingly all constructed as a unit. Early commercial building. Facade remains almost intact.

Remarks: Roof in rear has partially collapsed.

Owner: Chief Consolidated Mining Company

ANDREW DRUG (Occupied)

Construction: Ca. 1894

Architect-Constructor: Unknown

Function: Initially was the post office until 1922. Now Andrew Dug.

Significance: Rock structure with brick facade, early example of Tintic's commercial architecture. Still functioning.

Remarks: Property belonged to Pat Shea. Andrew Drug, E. G. Hanson, and Lucille's buildings probably built by same contractor; all stone with brick facades and same size.

In 1926 a merchandising company known as "Everybody's" occupied the building.

Owner: J. H. and Emily Andrew

B.P.O.E. BLOCK, ELKS LODGE #711

Construction: 1909-1910, by Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, Tintic Lodge #711. Cost $30,000.00

Architect/Contractor: Richard C. Watkins and John F. Birch, architects (Watkins & Birch). Martin E. Anderson, Logan, contractor. Watkins & Birch received $715; and Anderson, $18,650.

Function: Meeting hall for Elks lodge on upper floor, with rooms to be rented to doctors, lawyers, etc.; and lower floor to be rented commercially.

First floor initially rented to Hefferman-Thompson Company, general merchandise. Later, occupied by Norman & Jensen, and J. C. Penneys.

Significance: Impressive brick structure with ornate cornice and Greek Revival pediment, it housed the second Elk's lodge in the state of Utah.

Also, was designed by Richard C. Watkins, prominent architect. Social importance. Continues to function as it did; lodge hall is in excellent condition.

Remarks: The small structure on the east was added sometime between 1910-1923; but in 1929 the second story, five rooms for office suites, was built at a cost of $4,464. Scott & Welsh (G. W. Welsh), architects, and Louis S. Fetzer, of Salt Lake City, contractor. At that time the lower floor of the small building was occupied by the Eureka Mercantile Commission Company.

The Elks were organized June 20, 1901, the second lodge in Utah. "Tintic Lodge" was so-named because of a population requirement stipulating 4,000 as minimum. Eureka itself did not have enough, therefore the lodge encompassed the entire Tintic Mining District.

✓ Owner: B.P.O.E. #711, Eureka, Utah.

EUREKA MINERS' UNION HALL (Occupied)

Construction: 1907, for the Eureka Miners' Union, 151, Western Federation of Miners. Cost $16,000.00

Architect/Builder: Contractor was Henry T. Cornwall. Tom Clarke made the concrete block used.

Function: Second floor used as a union meeting place; also rented to various fraternal groups as a meeting hall.

First floor rented to commercial establishments. First occupant was the Golden Rule Store in 1909, owned and operated by Earl C. Sams and J. C. Penney. This was Penney's early chain of stores--sources indicate the "eleventh."

Significance: An early edifice erected by a mining union in Utah. In addition, a structure that housed a J. C. Penney store in its first years of development. E. C. Sams, the Eureka manager, later became national president of J. C. Penney Company.

The building still functions as it did when built. Steelworkers Local 4260 and various fraternal groups continue to meet there. The first floor still houses a commercial establishment--an IGA market. Meeting hall is in excellent condition.

Remarks: The union was organized in 1890, but disappeared in 1893 following a strike. It was reorganized February 8, 1902. The building committee for the structure consisted of J. R. Vance, Nick Ferrando, Henry Matsch, D. J. Russell, Sr., Rasmus Nelson, Robert Adamson, Major Church, and William P. Mitchell.

✓ Owner: Has always been the local union; currently United Steelworks Local 4260.

The building's first floor exterior facade has been altered. Unfortunately this altered the building's original appearance. A character of Italianate influence existed in a deep store space on the main level, with a central indented entrance flanked by large display windows. The ornated cornice is still evident.

POST OFFICE

Construction: 1922, by federal government

Architect/Builder: James A. Wetmore listed as "Acting Supervisory Architect."

Function: United States Post Office.

Significance: Later, more substantial structure, erected by federal government. Structure remains stucco with Spanish-style roof; and signifies government's view of Eureka as having substance and potential, not merely a boom town. Also, still functioning.

Remarks: The cornerstone lists Wetmore and Andrew Mellon, Secretary of Treasury. Building is in excellent condition and appearance.

EUREKA HISTORIC DISTRICT

Description: The proposed Eureka district encompasses the entire city of Eureka, the economic and social center of the Tintic Mining District. Located primarily in a gulch, the city is characterized by a long curving main street, running east and west, that separates the town in half. Streets follow the contours of the hills and railroad grades (see Eureka map). All historic resources represent the processes and flows of a mining center. Architecturally the district contains various types of structures, which in most cases represent vernacular forms as well as a fusion of styles.

Significance: Eureka district is significant as Tintic's center, containing a concentration of residential, commercial, institutional, and industrial structures all relevant to life in a mining town. (The Tintic District significance is discussed in the accompanying history.) The existence of residences built by mining entrepreneurs, much in a Prairie Style, illustrate the variations of wealth in a mining town. In the same district, and in an individual property, these same entrepreneurs, the Fitch family, not only built homes but there located the headquarters of their mines and the family cemetery--a most unique practice among mine owners.

Some properties which generally are exempted from National Register listing are included as integral parts of the district. Church buildings--Catholic, Latter-day Saints, and Methodist--all reflect the religious character of Eureka. The Catholic rectory and convent also reflects the wealth and support provided by the Fitch Family. Architecturally the Methodist and L.D.S. Churches represent the Gothic style in wood; and although the L.D.S. structure has been altered, its Gothic treatment is rare among old standing Mormon churches. Given the nature of a mining town (i.e. an area of fluidity of movement) some buildings, primarily residences, have been moved; but some movement is in itself a characteristic of mining town life.

The Eureka Historic District primarily follows the legal city limits with the exception of two extensions on the southern end. These two exceptions are: (1) Fitchville and the Chief No. 1 Mine; and (2) the Chief No. 2 Mine. The reasoning behind this decision was the significance and identification of the Fitch family with Eureka. In addition, the Chief No. 1 shaft was utilized to mine ore under the city limits.
