7. Description

This 20.3 mile section of state maintained Route 66 serves as a frontage and local road along Interstate 40 from west of the Montoya interchange to where the road junctions with the westbound exit ramp at the Cuervo interchange. Generally following what, prior to 1926, was known as the Ozark Trail and, after 1926, Route 66, the alignment received a hard surface in 1936 under FAP 114. During 1951 further improvements were made on the road including the addition of concrete box and pipe culverts and roadbed stabilization. Coursing across pinyon and juniper covered hills and mesas and crossing small drainages feeding into Bull Canyon and Parajito Creeks, this portion of Route 66 is largely unaltered beyond normal road maintenance and conveys a strong feeling of travel along Route 66 during the period of significance. Brown and white signs denoting "Historic Route 66" have recently been erected by the New Mexico State Highway and Transportation Department along the roadside.

Heading west, the road section begins west of the I-40 interchange at Montoya and parallels I-40, holding the highway to the north. At 7.1 miles an overpass, resulting in an alignment deviation of approximately .5 miles carries the road into a hilly area punctuated by sandstone outcroppings. Several ridges permit striking vistas of the interstate, railroad and Route 66 grades roughly paralleling each other. Each alignment, however, negotiates the topography differently, offering a striking contrast in evolving alignment engineering. At mile 12 the road passes through Newkirk, a rural village with several vacant garages, tourist courts and cafes that once served Route 66 travellers. West of Newkirk, Route 66 resumes its close parallel with I-40. The road section ends at the east exit of the I-40 interchange at Cuervo. Although I-40 closely parallels some portions of this section of Route 66, causing a slight deviation from the original alignment of less than a half mile at one overpass, the historic alignment, cross-section template, and surrounding landscape remain largely intact.

8. Significance

Designated as State Highway 3 in 1914 and a part of the Ozark Trail, a regional road association that preceded the creation of the federal highway system in 1926, the road from Montoya to Cuervo underwent improvements and slight realignments in the late 1920s and early 1930s. These improvements were funded under FAP 114 and resulted, in 1936, with the hard surfacing of the present alignment. This section of state-maintained Route 66 is significant for its association with the rise of automobile tourism in New Mexico and thus is eligible under Criterion A. With its historic alignment, its structural elements including cut banks, concrete culverts and a steel beam bridge reflecting early road construction techniques, design and materials, the section is eligible under Criterion C.

Verbal Boundary Description

This property is 20.3 miles long. The east end lies at the junction of the frontage road and the eastbound exit ramp of I-40 at the Montoya interchange, and the west end lies at the junction of the frontage road and the westbound exit ramp of I-40 at the Cuervo interchange. The sides are defined by a corridor extending fifty feet on each side of the road's centerline, marking a right of way of 100 feet, a minimum width used by the State Highway Department during the 1930s.

Boundary Justification

The boundary includes the entire parcel historically associated with this section of Route 66.
